

English Patriot

EQUALITY FOR THE ENGLISH

Issue #1

www.englishdemocrats.party

2020

Covid-19 'cure' worse than disease?

Page 13

FREE Lionheart Poster
Centre Pages

"Green and Pleasant Land"
CELEBRATE England!

See Page 8

FAIR DEAL FOR

FREEDOM

"More to do" says
BREXIT Battler
Tilbrook

●● We got our BREXIT, but it was touch-and-go!

Robin Tilbrook, the battling Essex solicitor who TWICE took the government to court to force them to honour the decision of the people, tells the English

Covid-19 'cure'
worse than disease?

Page 13

FREE Lionheart Poster
Centre Pages

"Green and Pleasant Land"
CELEBRATE England!

See Page 8

FAIR DEAL FOR ENGLAND!

●● Who pay the bulk of UK taxes? Who get blamed whenever anything goes wrong? Who get called 'racist' just for asking what all the others seem to get automatically? Whose special day is ignored by the national broadcaster? The English, of course!

Was there ever a people more decent and more put-upon? More tolerant and more abused? More patient and more ignored? The answer, of course, is no!

So we got our Brexit, but that's just the start! There's a lot more for English people power to achieve now.

We don't want special treatment, we just demand EQUAL treatment. We're not racist; we just demand an end to anti-English racism.

We don't want to rule over others, we just demand to elect our own leaders to make our own laws - without having MPs from anywhere else interfere. The Scots, it seems to be a one-way street. All sorts of 'minorities' are allowed to have their 'Pride'. They get their own parades, council grants, their own History Months, TV specials and official recognition.

But say a word about English pride and you're a 'ghastly old bigot'. Fly the Cross of St. George and you're 'Islamophobic'.

Use the wrong pronoun for someone who's had a sex change (on our NHS, of ignored. We've had enough of getting only the blame and the bills. It's time for a fair deal for England and the English.

FREEDOM

"More to do" says
BREXIT Battler
Tilbrook

●● We got our BREXIT, but it was touch-and-go!

Robin Tilbrook, the battling Essex solicitor who TWICE took the government to court to force them to honour the decision of the people, tells the English Patriot more about his legal challenges and the way ahead.

Read more on page 5.

SELF-HELP

Great Veterans'
Charity Still Going Strong

DEAL FOR ENGLAND!

●● Who pay the bulk of UK taxes? Who get blamed whenever anything goes wrong? Who get called 'racist' just for asking what all the others seem to get automatically? Whose special day is ignored by the national broadcaster? The English, of course!

Was there ever a people more decent and more put-upon? More tolerant and more abused? More patient and more ignored? The answer, of course, is no!

But it's beginning to change – and not before time! England voted for Brexit by such a huge margin that the pro-Brussels votes of Scotland, Wales and Northern Ireland couldn't or deny our democratic right to decide our own destiny.

So we got our Brexit, but that's just the start! There's a lot more for English people power to achieve now.

We don't want special treatment, we just demand EQUAL treatment. We're not racist; we just demand an end to anti-English racism.

We don't want to rule over others, we just demand to elect our own leaders to make our own laws – without having MPs from anywhere else interfere. The Scots, Welsh and Northern Irish have that Home Rule – and so should the English! Isn't it only fair?

And we demand a fair deal over culture and identity as well. We're told to celebrate 'diversity', but all too often it seems to be a one-way street. All sorts of 'minorities' are allowed to have their 'Pride'. They get their own parades, council grants, their own History Months, TV specials and official recognition.

But say a word about English pride and you're a 'ghastly old bigot'. Fly the Cross of St. George and you're 'Islamophobic'.

Use the wrong pronoun for someone who's had a sex change (on our NHS, of course) and you're in court and out of a job. The lunatics really have taken over the asylum!

Well, we've had enough of the crazy headlines and the PC bullying of the Silent Majority. We're tired of being ignored. We've had enough of getting only the blame and the bills. It's time for a fair deal for England and the English.

GROOMING SCANDAL It's STILL going on!

●● Latest Home Office figures show a staggering six-fold increase in the number of child sexual grooming figures over the last five years.

Page 5

CORONAVIRUS

How could they get it so WRONG?

●● All the government and Lying Press propaganda fools no-one. The Corona Clampdown was the worst and most disastrous over-reaction and mishandling of a medium-level health threat in our entire history.

Page 4

●● We got our BREXIT, but it was touch-and-go!

Robin Tilbrook, the battling Essex solicitor who TWICE took the government to court to force them to honour the decision of the people, tells the English Patriot more about his legal challenges and the way ahead.

Read more on page 5.

SELF-HELP

Great Veterans' Charity Still Going Strong

●● Soldiers Off The Street was founded more than ten years ago. Starting with a tea-urn and a few blankets in the boot of a car, they now have a fleet of 6 outreach vans and have helped homeless Forces veterans get back on their feet all over the country.

Not a penny of government funding of course – just the generosity of ordinary people who support their mission to help homeless veterans.

More on page 3

EDITOR

Wat Tyler

England Arise!

●● Yes, I'm back – the original English rebel.

If you were fortunate enough to go to school before Labour's 1968 generation cultural Marxists wrecked the education system, you'll remember me. If not, then find out more at the bottom of this page. Either way, I hope you'll accept my congratulations for the success of your own "Peasants' Revolt" against foreign rule – Brexit!

But I'm warning you that, whether the robber-barons are sword-wielding psychopaths from Normandy, pen-pushing bureaucrats or the CEOs of global corporations, they will NEVER accept the right of ordinary people like us to control our own destinies and to reap the just rewards of our labours.

Stop funding the Blatant Bias Corporation

●● Over the past four years more than 4 million British citizens have decided not to pay a penny more to the BBC.

They all saved themselves £147 a year. More than that, they've stuck the traditional English two-fingers up to an organisation now notorious for 'woke' far-left drivel and virulent anti-normal hatred.

And, of course, they have tired of paying for a channel they don't even watch any more now that services such as Netflix and Amazon Prime are so easy to get.

If peoples' limited budget forces them to choose, they'd rather pay to watch The Crown on Netflix than pay an extra tax just for the privilege of wading through the Beeb's desperate afternoon quiz shows in search of high-quality programmes.

If the present system was applied to newspapers, you'd walk into the news-agent and ask for a copy of the Mail or the Sun or the Telegraph, only for Mr. Patel to say "I'm sorry, but I can't sell you the paper you want unless you also buy the Guardian!"

down the drain, in other words. And 90 people ended up in jail — also a scandalous waste of public resources at a time when we are running out of cells to house genuine villains.

But here's an extra reason for opting out of the licence fee. A page on the BBC's vast network of websites is devoted to what it calls "Corporate Responsibility".

Even if you are familiar with the corporation's right-on preening, the suffocating self-importance will make you gasp.

It's headed: "Putting our Public Purposes into action: Sustaining citizenship and civil society."

"The BBC's impartial news, current affairs and factual programming aims to help audiences understand political activity and raise awareness on important issues affecting society... We aim to engage audiences in social responsibility and what it means to be part of a civil society."

Did you enjoy all the BBC's "impartial" awareness-

* Don't watch its biased 'news'!

Escape the Licence
Fee Rip-off

If you only watch these you don't need to stump up

The first thing to do as part of this process is cancel your payments.

If you pay by direct debit you can cancel it by filling out TV Licensing's contact form, confirming you no longer watch TV along with your current address.

England Arise!

●● Yes, I'm back – the original English rebel.

If you were fortunate enough to go to school before Labour's 1968 generation cultural Marxists wrecked the education system, you'll remember me. If not, then find out more at the bottom of this page. Either way, I hope you'll accept my congratulations for the success of your own "Peasants' Revolt" against foreign rule – Brexit!

But I'm warning you that, whether the robber-barons are sword-wielding psychopaths from Normandy, pen-pushing bureaucrats or the CEOs of global corporations, they will NEVER accept the right of ordinary people like us to control our own destinies and to reap the just rewards of our labours.

You and over 17 million more won the Brexit vote, and Johnson may yet force a decent settlement out of Brussels. But just because the country is free from the EU doesn't mean that everyone can go back to sleep.

Brexit was a vote for government that listens. What do you think of how they've handled the CoronaCrisis? Is the way they crucified small businesses just incompetence – or was the crisis deliberately exploited to crush the 'little guys' and boost the power of the elite to stamp out protests?

Brexit was a vote against mass immigration, but while it's meant fewer Poles and Hungarians, the

●● Over the past four years more than 4 million British citizens have decided not to pay a penny more to the BBC.

They all saved themselves £147 a year. More than that, they've stuck the traditional English two-fingers up to an organisation now notorious for 'woke' far-left drivel and virulent anti-normal hatred.

And, of course, they have tired of paying for a channel they don't even watch any more now that services such as Netflix and Amazon Prime are so easy to get.

If peoples' limited budget forces them to choose, they'd rather pay to watch The Crown on Netflix than pay an extra tax just for the privilege of wading through the Beeb's desperate afternoon quiz shows in search of high-quality programmes.

If the present system was applied to newspapers, you'd walk into the news-agent and ask for a copy of the Mail or the Sun or the Telegraph, only for Mr. Patel to say "I'm sorry, but I can't sell you the paper you want unless you also buy the Guardian!"

For years, the Magistrates Association has argued that non-payment of the licence fee should be decriminalised.

In 2016, there were 184,595 prosecutions and other legal proceedings against alleged non-payers. Of these, a staggering 21,312 were unsuccessful — our money down the drain, in other words. And 90 people ended up in jail — also a scandalous waste of public resources at a time when we are running out of cells to house genuine villains.

But here's an extra reason for opting out of the licence fee. A page on the BBC's vast network of websites is devoted to what it calls "Corporate Responsibility".

Even if you are familiar with the corporation's right-on preening, the suffocating self-importance will make you gasp.

It's headed: "Putting our Public Purposes into action: Sustaining citizenship and civil society."

"The BBC's impartial news, current affairs and factual programming aims to help audiences understand political activity and raise awareness on important issues affecting society... We aim to engage audiences in social responsibility and what it means to be part of a civil society."

Did you enjoy all the BBC's "impartial" awareness-raising about the apocalyptic consequences of Brexit?

So you pay the licence fee, and they use your money to tell you lies and to brainwash your children and grandchildren. Is it any wonder so many people are saying "Enough is Enough" and hitting the BBC where it hurts?

BBC

* Don't watch its biased 'news'!

Escape the Licence Fee Rip-off

Fortunately, there are ways to legally watch your favourite shows without paying the licence fee.

There are plenty of catch-up TV services, which allow the streaming or downloading of programmes after they have been shown on their respective channels.

If you only watch these you don't need to stump up - as long as you don't watch any BBC content.

If you're absolutely sure you no longer need one you can formally let TV Licensing know. Although there's no legal obligation to do this, it will prevent an increasing number of bullying letters coming your way.

The first thing to do as part of this process is cancel your payments.

If you pay by direct debit you can cancel it by filling out TV Licensing's contact form, confirming you no longer watch TV along with your current address.

You'll also need to cancel your direct debit with your bank. If you pay with a TV Licensing payment card, call 0300 555 0286.

Then fill out a "No Licence Needed" declaration form. Make sure you keep the confirmation email from TV Licensing as proof.

The "Peasants' Revolt" – The English Rebellion

●● In 1381, England had seen a third of its population wiped out by the Black Death (now that was a real plague!). The French-speaking elite wildfire, and men from Essex, Norfolk and Suffolk, marched on London while a second rebel host marched from Kent to Blackheath just south of the Thames.

It agreed to the peasants' demands to end serfdom and feudalism. Happy with this, many headed home.

The next day, Richard met Wat Tyler and his hardcore of Kentish rebels system you remember me. If not, then find out more at the bottom of this page. Either way, I hope you'll accept my congratulations for the success of your own "Peasants' Revolt" against foreign rule – Brexit!

But I'm warning you that, whether the robber-barons are sword-wielding psychopaths from Normandy, pen-pushing bureaucrats or the CEOs of global corporations, they will NEVER accept the right of ordinary people like us to control our own destinies and to reap the just rewards of our labours.

You and over 17 million more won the Brexit vote, and Johnson may yet force a decent settlement out of Brussels. But just because the country is free from the EU doesn't mean that everyone can go back to sleep.

Brexit was a vote for government that listens. What do you think of how they've handled the CoronaCrisis? Is the way they crucified small businesses just incompetence – or was the crisis deliberately exploited to crush the 'little guys' and boost the power of the elite to stamp out protests?

Brexit was a vote against mass immigration, but while it's meant fewer Poles and Hungarians, the number of Africans and Asians – many of them Muslims – the Johnson regime let into our country last year was the highest ever. And watch how the super-rich vultures swoop in for the privatisation pickings.

We may have won the Brexit battle, but the war for English survival and freedom is only just beginning!

Robin Tilbrook's warning about the government's police state power grab should also ring a big bell.

If people's limited budget forces them to choose, they'd rather pay to watch The Crown on Netflix than pay an extra tax just for the privilege of wading through the Beeb's desperate afternoon quiz shows in search of high-quality programmes.

If the present system was applied to newspapers, you'd walk into the news-agent and ask for a copy of the Mail or the Sun or the Telegraph, only for Mr. Patel to say "I'm sorry, but I can't sell you the paper you want unless you also buy the Guardian!"

For years, the Magistrates Association has argued that non-payment of the licence fee should be decriminalised.

In 2016, there were 184,595 prosecutions and other legal proceedings against alleged non-payers. Of these, a staggering 21,312 were unsuccessful — our money is headed. Putting our Public Purposes into action: Sustaining citizenship and civil society."

"The BBC's impartial news, current affairs and factual programming aims to help audiences understand political activity and raise awareness on important issues affecting society... We aim to engage audiences in social responsibility and what it means to be part of a civil society."

Did you enjoy all the BBC's "impartial" awareness-raising about the apocalyptic consequences of Brexit?

So you pay the licence fee, and they use your money to tell you lies and to brainwash your children and grandchildren. Is it any wonder so many people are saying "Enough is Enough" and hitting the BBC where it hurts?

BBC

* Don't watch its biased 'news'!

Escape the Licence Fee Rip-off

Fortunately, there are ways to legally watch your favourite shows without paying the licence fee.

There are plenty of catch-up TV services, which allow the streaming or downloading of programmes after they have been shown on their respective channels.

If you only watch these you don't need to stump up – as long as you don't watch any BBC content.

If you're absolutely sure you no longer need one you can formally let TV Licensing know. Although there's no legal obligation to do this, it will prevent an increasing number of bullying letters coming your way.

The first thing to do as part of this process is cancel your payments.

If you pay by direct debit you can cancel it by filling out TV Licensing's contact form, confirming you no longer watch TV along with your current address.

You'll also need to cancel your direct debit with your bank. If you pay with a TV Licensing payment card, call 0300 555 0286.

Then fill out a "No Licence Needed" declaration form. Make sure you keep the confirmation email from TV Licensing as proof.

The "Peasants' Revolt" – The English Rebellion

●● In 1381, England had seen a third of its population wiped out by the Black Death (now that was a real plague!). The French-speaking elite who had ruled the country since 1066 were looking to screw the surviving English even harder.

A new 'poll tax' was announced; everyone over the age of 15 had to pay a shilling. Nothing to the great lords and rich merchants, but a fortune to ordinary men and women.

Things exploded in May, when a tax collector arrived in the Essex village of Fobbing. The angry locals roughed him up and sent him packing, as they did the soldiers later sent to restore order.

Word of the rising spread like wildfire, and men from Essex, Norfolk and Suffolk, marched on London while a second rebel host marched from Kent to Blackheath just south of the Thames.

The rebels destroyed tax records and registers, and dealt out rough justice to any tax collectors or foreigners they met. During the march one man emerged as their natural leader – Wat Tyler (Walter the Tyler) from Kent.

Throughout the revolt it was clear that there was immense resentment against the French-speaking elite; in truth, it was not a Peasants' Revolt, but an English Rebellion against alien rule.

The king met Wat Tyler at Mile End on 14th June. At this meeting, Richard II agreed to the peasants' demands to end serfdom and feudalism. Happy with this, many headed home.

The next day, Richard met Wat Tyler and his hardcore of Kentish rebels again, at Smithfield, just outside of the city's walls.

At this tense meeting the Lord Mayor drew his dagger and stabbed Tyler. Badly injured in the neck, the rebel leader was taken to nearby St Bartholomew's Hospital.

The king promised to lead the rebels instead and they naively agreed to go home. The injured Wat Tyler was beheaded and the King promptly went back on his word, reimposed serfdom and had 1,500 of the rebels executed.

Patriots Help Homeless Veterans

SOCIAL-CRISIS Charity 'Soldiers Off The Street' steps in to help Forces veterans left on the scrap-heap and homeless by the political elite

●●● It all started when Londoner Bill Murray stopped to chat to a homeless man huddled in a shop doorway. Learning that he and many other rough-sleepers were ex-soldiers, Bill was so appalled that he decided to do something to help.

Calling a couple of friends, Bill rustled up a few blankets, sandwiches and some

When it got too large to run from their own garages, the volunteers took things a stage further. Added by generous donations and all sorts of imaginative fund-raising initiatives, they leased a large industrial unit.

As word of what they were doing spread through Facebook and other their lives back on track. His Facebook post went viral, getting more than 300,000 shares, and one million likes, but it was a Soldiers Off The Street volunteer who put him in touch with the former soldier who moved into the property in Netherton Road, Dudley just a week later.

England's Other Saint

"St. George was Turkish anyway", the BBC and other anti-English haters often sneer. They don't mention, of course, that he was a Christian who lived in what was then an ethnically European country, from which his memory has been banished by Islamic expansionism – which perhaps makes him a particularly appropriate Patron Saint for 21st century England!

The cult of St. George has deep roots in England, having been brought back by knights returning from the Crusades, but it is true that we share him with – among others – the

he was crowned King of East Anglia in 855. Captured by Danish Vikings in 869, he was offered the chance to live as a puppet king if he renounced his Christian faith. Edmund refused, so the invaders tied him to a tree, used him as an archery target and then beheaded him.

He died on 20th November, which remains his feast day. According to his biographer, Abbo of Fleury, his head was miraculously reunited with his body, aided by a talking wolf. It's easy to mock the miraculous aspects of his martyrdom, but the details of his life are not

SOCIAL-CRISIS Charity "Soldiers Off The Street" steps in to help Forces veterans left on the scrap-heap and homeless by the political elite

●●● It all started when Londoner Bill Murray stopped to chat to a homeless man huddled in a shop doorway. Learning that he and many other rough-sleepers were ex-soldiers, Bill was so appalled that he decided to do something to help.

Calling a couple of friends, Bill rustled up a few blankets, sandwiches and some flasks of hot tea. With everything in the boot of his car, they drove round all that cold evening, finding homeless veterans and giving them all the help they could.

Talking about it over the next few days, Bill and his colleagues decided that they had to make this more than a one-off gesture. That was back in 2010, and the group they founded, Soldiers Off The Street, has gone from strength to strength, helping literally thousands of homeless services veterans.

The flasks of tea quickly turned into proper tea urns and in due course the car boots were replaced by striking sign-painted vans, kitted out with everything from soup kitchen gas burners to racks and boxes to hold supplies of blankets, sleeping bags, warm clothes and

When it got too large to run from their own garages, the volunteers took things a stage further. Added by generous donations and all sorts of imaginative fund-raising initiatives, they leased a large industrial unit.

As word of what they were doing spread through Facebook and other grapevines, more SOS groups were formed. Despite some disgraceful smears by anti-patriotic leftists, the whole operation was approved as a registered charity and kept on growing.

Today, Soldiers Off The Street has a whole fleet of six liveried vans, going out night after night to find and help homeless veterans.

Their growing expertise and the contacts and trust they've built through their outreach operations soon made SOS valuable partners for other ex-forces charities running hostels and rehousing schemes for homeless vets.

A typical example of this came when a generous Black Country landlord, Chris Foxall, turned to social media to offer one of his flats rent free for three months to their lives back on track. His Facebook post went viral, getting more than 300,000 shares, and one million likes, but it was a Soldiers Off The Street volunteer who put him in touch with the former soldier who moved into the property in Netherton Road, Dudley just a week later.

Ex Grenadier Guardsman Daniel not only got a decent roof over his head, but a local garage owner even gave him a car.

Father-of-two Mr Foxall, 42, said: "It all went a bit mental. I couldn't believe how many people came forward with offers of support, and several other landlords are now looking into doing a similar thing, it's been wild and quite emotional too.

"I was touched by the amount of ex-servicemen on the streets after giving such a sacrifice to serve their country, so I wanted to help out.

"Daniel is such a nice guy, and it was extremely humbling to meet him and show him the flat. I found him via charity Soldiers off the Streets who have been a

"St. George was Turkish anyway", the BBC and other anti-English haters often sneer. They don't mention, of course, that he was a Christian who lived in what was then an ethnically European country, from which his memory has been banished by Islamic expansionism – which perhaps makes him a particularly appropriate Patron Saint for 21st century England!

The cult of St. George has deep roots in England, having been brought back by knights returning from the Crusades, but it is true that we share him with – among others – the Greeks, Malta, Montenegro and the Russians. Indeed, since Vladimir Putin restored Christianity to its central place in Russia, there are even images of George slaying the Dragon on every tram, train and bus in Moscow.

St. George is great, and we all love his Crusader Cross flag, but if you happen to want a 100% English saint, you're in luck. Because long before St. George became England's favourite martyr, there was another: St. Edmund.

Fans of Bernard Cornwell's books and TV series The Last Kingdom, will already know he was crowned King of East Anglia in 855. Captured by Danish Vikings in 869, he was offered the chance to live as a puppet king if he renounced his Christian faith. Edmund refused, so the invaders tied him to a tree, used him as an archery target and then beheaded him.

He died on 20th November, which remains his feast day. According to his biographer, Abbo of Fleury, his head was miraculously reunited with his body, aided by a talking wolf. It's easy to mock the miraculous aspects of his martyrdom, but the details of his life are not in doubt. And, unlike Saint George, he actually lived (and died) in England.

Edmund was captured at Hoxne, in Suffolk, and killed either there or in the nearby village of Bradfield St Clare. In 902 his body was taken to nearby Bedricsworth, where King Athelstan established a shrine in his honour. This quickly became associated with healing miracles and became Bury St Edmunds. Edmund was soon established as England's Patron Saint. During the Middle Ages, his shrine became a must-see destination, as popular as

●● It all started when Londoner Bill Murray stopped to chat to a homeless man huddled in a shop doorway. Learning that he and many other rough-sleepers were ex-soldiers, Bill was so appalled that he decided to do something to help.

Calling a couple of friends, Bill rustled up a few blankets, sandwiches and some flasks of hot tea. With everything in the boot of his car, they drove round all that cold evening, finding homeless veterans and giving them all the help they could.

Talking about it over the next few days, Bill and his colleagues decided that they had to make this more than a one-off gesture. That was back in 2010, and the group they founded, Soldiers Off The Street, has gone from strength to strength, helping literally thousands of homeless services veterans.

The flasks of tea quickly turned into proper tea urns and in due course the car boots were replaced by striking sign-painted vans, kitted out with everything from soup kitchen gas burners to racks and boxes to hold supplies of blankets, sleeping bags, warm clothes and information leaflets.

When it got too large to run from their own garages, the volunteers took things a stage further. Added by generous donations and all sorts of imaginative fund-raising initiatives, they leased a large industrial unit.

As word of what they were doing spread through Facebook and other grapevines, more SOS groups were formed. Despite some disgraceful smears by anti-patriotic leftists, the whole operation was approved as a registered charity and kept on growing.

Today, Soldiers Off The Street has a whole fleet of six liveried vans, going out night after night to find and help homeless veterans.

Their growing expertise and the contacts and trust they've built through their outreach operations soon made SOS valuable partners for other ex-forces charities running hostels and rehousing schemes for homeless vets.

A typical example of this came when a generous Black Country landlord, Chris Foxall, turned to social media to offer one of his flats rent free for three months to any homeless soldier, to help them get their lives back on track. His Facebook post went viral, getting more than 300,000 shares, and one million likes, but it was a Soldiers Off The Street volunteer who put him in touch with the former soldier who moved into the property in Netherton Road, Dudley just a week later.

Ex Grenadier Guardsman Daniel not only got a decent roof over his head, but a local garage owner even gave him a car.

Father-of-two Mr Foxall, 42, said: "It all went a bit mental. I couldn't believe how many people came forward with offers of support, and several other landlords are now looking into doing a similar thing, it's been wild and quite emotional too."

"I was touched by the amount of ex-servicemen on the streets after giving such a sacrifice to serve their country, so I wanted to help out."

"Daniel is such a nice guy, and it was extremely humbling to meet him and show him the flat. I found him via charity Soldiers off the Streets who have been a great support."

anti-English haters often sneer. They don't mention, of course, that he was a Christian who lived in what was then an ethnically European country, from which his memory has been banished by Islamic expansionism – which perhaps makes him a particularly appropriate Patron Saint for 21st century England!

The cult of St. George has deep roots in England, having been brought back by knights returning from the Crusades, but it is true that we share him with – among others – the Greeks, Malta, Montenegro and the Russians. Indeed, since Vladimir Putin restored Christianity to its central place in Russia, there are even images of George slaying the Dragon on every tram, train and bus in Moscow.

St. George is great, and we all love his Crusader Cross flag, but if you happen to want a 100% English saint, you're in luck. Because long before St. George became England's favourite martyr, there was another: St. Edmund.

Fans of Bernard Cornwell's books and TV series The Last Kingdom, will already know of Edmund. Born in 841 A.D.,

Danish Vikings in 869, he was offered the chance to live as a puppet king if he renounced his Christian faith. Edmund refused, so the invaders tied him to a tree, used him as an archery target and then beheaded him.

He died on 20th November, which remains his feast day. According to his biographer, Abbo of Fleury, his head was miraculously reunited with his body, aided by a talking wolf. It's easy to mock the miraculous aspects of his martyrdom, but the details of his life are not in doubt. And, unlike Saint George, he actually lived (and died) in England.

Edmund was captured at Hoxne, in Suffolk, and killed either there or in the nearby village of Bradfield St Clare. In 902 his body was taken to nearby Bedricsworth, where King Athelstan established a shrine in his honour. This quickly became associated with healing miracles and became Bury St Edmunds. Edmund was soon established as England's Patron Saint. During the Middle Ages, his shrine became a must-see destination, as popular as Canterbury.

Edmund's crown and arrows banner has now been adopted as the flag of Suffolk, seen here in the historic village of Kersey

CLAMPDOWN

The Forgotten People – demand grows for an English Parliament

●●The government's ham-fisted Corona Clampdown has highlighted once again the terrible cost to ordinary people of out-of-touch elite. It reminds us that the Scots, Northern Irish and the Welsh all have their own legislative assemblies yet, WE, the English have NOTHING! Their local MPs make their laws, while the English are dictated to by MPs from every corner of the British Isles.

Not only is this unfair but it puts every Englishman and woman at a serious disadvantage. This is why the English Democrats' demand for an English Parliament is growing in popularity. Equal treatment for the English, no more, no less. Isn't it just fair?

The SNP, Sinn Féin and Plaid Cymru want independence. Fine! But it has to be a majority decision. That means by the English. And WE want independence from THEM too!

It's time for an amicable 'divorce' – like the one that saw the Czechs and Slovaks divide into two separate nations.

They're all still friendly – in fact they get on better as good neighbours than they were forced together.

CORONAVIRUS: How could THEY get it so WRONG?

●●First, the government refused to close our borders. Planeloads of potential carriers were allowed in from known disease hotspots in China and Italy for weeks after the danger was crystal clear. This government was dithering and then getting it all so wrong.

Neil Ferguson, the 'expert' whose alarmist predictions provided the ONLY scientific evidence to support the UK clampdown, came out within that were the backbone of Middle England.

The whole thing was so shockingly mishandled that we have to choose between two stark alternative reasons:

First, the governments tragedies as an excuse to further their own greedy and power-hungry agenda.

But why would the global elite want to wreck the world economy? What could they have had to gain from what they've small and medium businesses. Their assets now go to the banks and loan sharks, while the giant corporations – bailed out as always – will go on their merry way free from pesky independent competitors.

terrible cost to ordinary people of out-of-touch elite. It reminds us that the Scots, Northern Irish and the Welsh all have their own legislative assemblies yet, WE, the English have NOTHING! Their local MPs make their laws, while the English are dictated to by MPs from every corner of the British Isles.

Not only is this unfair but it puts every Englishman and woman at a serious disadvantage. This is why the English Democrats' demand for an English Parliament is growing in popularity. Equal treatment for the English, no more, no less. Isn't it just fair?

The SNP, Sinn Féin and Plaid Cymru want independence. Fine! But it has to be a majority decision. That means by the English. And WE want independence from THEM too!

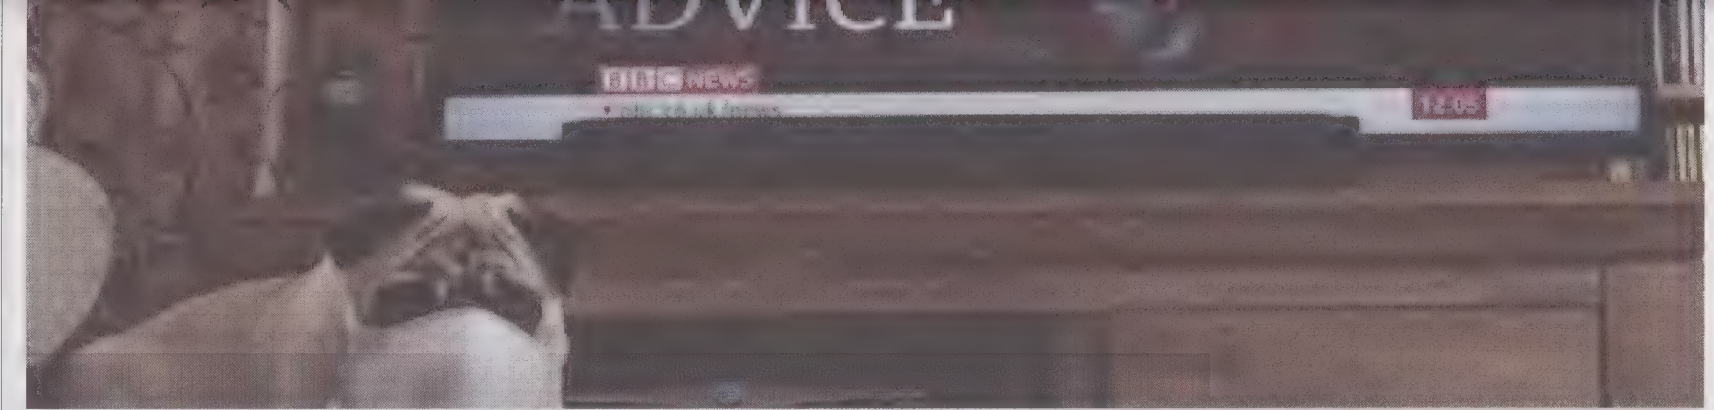

It's time for an amicable 'divorce' – like the one that saw the Czechs and Slovaks divide into two separate nations. They're all still friendly – in fact they get on better as good neighbours than they were forced together.

How England's Covid19 volunteers "just got on with it"

●● If you want something done – just do it yourself! That's the lesson learned by huge numbers of normal, decent English people during the Coronavirus lockdown.

When the government appealed for volunteers to help with NHS and social service operations in the community, more than 500,000 signed up in little more than a day. But then they had to sit and wait for clearance, overwhelmed Apps and instructions that never

CORONAVIRUS: How could THEY get it so WRONG?

●● First, the government refused to close our borders. Planeloads of potential carriers were allowed in from known disease hotspots in China and Italy for weeks after the danger was crystal clear. This catastrophic error was the direct result of the Johnson regime's virtue-signalling 'anti-racism'.

Without the impact of that deadly PC dogma, the government would have had several weeks more to organise preparations for the pandemic. That said, even once it struck, they still got it wrong. We should have had the isolation of the vulnerable, coupled with mass testing for the virus and the immediate quarantining of the sick.

Huge number of younger and fitter people contracted and recovered from Covid-19 with no or only mild symptoms. Had the sheep and cow tests government was dithering and then getting it all so wrong.

Neil Ferguson, the 'expert' whose alarmist predictions provided the ONLY scientific evidence to support the UK clampdown, came out within ten days to admit that the real threat was far less than he had first predicted. But STILL they blundered on and put us all under house arrest.

Covid-19 was always going to be a threat to the old, the very sick, and a small number of healthy but unlucky souls. But proportionate measures to try to protect them could have been taken, without the bullying clampdown of economically active Britain. Without breaking the small and medium businesses that were the backbone of Middle England.

The whole thing was so shockingly mishandled that we have to choose between two stark alternative reasons:

First, the governments of the United Kingdom and most of the Western world are all composed of completely incompetent fools, and the entire mass media are irresponsible cowards who went along with their hysterical response for the sake of an easy life and increased viewing figures.

Or, second, the global elite and their occupation government deliberately exaggerated the danger. They exploited the genuine Corona tragedies as an excuse to further their own greedy and power-hungry agenda.

But why would the global elite want to wreck the world economy? What could they have had to gain from what they've done? As it happens, rather a lot: The 2008 financial crisis was caused by the short-sighted greed of their banking system. As well as making the rest of us pay for the crimes of the banksters with a long decade of austerity, the globalists have spent 12 years fighting the fall-out from that disaster by giant Quantitative Easing bail-outs.

In plain English, they've printed vast amounts of money and given it to the already super-rich in order to stop their financial system melting down. So much so, that their whole fiat money house of cards has been poised to come crashing down of its own accord at any moment anyway.

small and medium businesses. Their assets now go to the banks and loan sharks, while the giant corporations – bailed out as always – will go on their merry way free from pesky independent competitors.

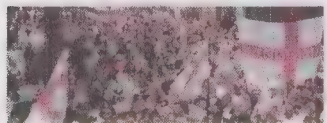

The collapse of world stock markets wiped out the investments and crushed the pension funds of millions of decent middle class people. Super rich CEOs like Jeff Bezos sold off their own holdings just before the storm broke, and you could bet anything you've got left that they will also get tipped off just before the artificial panic is ended, so that they can buy again when the markets hit rock bottom.

And if you want to protest about all this elite fraud? Well, the police state powers seized by governments might get put back on the shelf when they turn off the mass media panic

The SNP, Sinn Féin and Plaid Cymru want independence. Fine! But it has to be a majority decision. That means by the English. And WE want independence from THEM too!

It's time for an amicable 'divorce' – like the one that saw the Czechs and Slovaks divide into two separate nations. They're all still friendly – in fact they get on better as good neighbours than they were forced together.

How England's Covid-19 volunteers "just got on with it"

●● If you want something done – just do it yourself! That's the lesson learned by huge numbers of normal, decent English people during the Coronavirus lockdown.

When the government appealed for volunteers to help with NHS and social service operations in the community, more than 500,000 signed up in little more than a day. But then they had to sit and wait for clearance, overwhelmed Apps and instructions that never came.

Small wonder then that the most successful groups were those that didn't even bother asking for bureaucratic 'permission' or official approval. Whether doing shopping for nurses, taking meals round to self-isolating pensioners, or checking on potentially lonely neighbours, the people who just got on with it did the most good.

There's a lesson in this for the future!

could THEY get it so WRONG?

●● First, the government refused to close our borders. Planeloads of potential carriers were allowed in from known disease hotspots in China and Italy for weeks after the danger was crystal clear. This catastrophic error was the direct result of the Johnson regime's virtue-signalling 'anti-racism'.

Without the impact of that deadly PC dogma, the government would have had several weeks more to organise preparations for the pandemic. That said, even once it struck, they still got it wrong. We should have had the isolation of the vulnerable, coupled with mass testing for the virus and the immediate quarantining of the sick.

Huge number of younger and fitter people contracted and recovered from Covid-19 with no or only mild symptoms. Had the cheap and easy tests for antibodies been used en masse right from the start, millions of these could have been left free to work. This alone would have kept most of the economy working and avoided the economic catastrophe that the utterly ham-fisted Corona Clampdown in fact produced.

None of this is known only in hindsight. The experience of early-hit countries such as South Korea and Singapore had already shown the way while UK government was dithering and then getting it all so wrong.

Neil Ferguson, the 'expert' whose alarmist predictions provided the ONLY scientific evidence to support the UK clampdown, came out within ten days to admit that the real threat was far less than he had first predicted. But STILL they blundered on and put us all under house arrest.

Covid-19 was always going to be a threat to the old, the very sick, and a small number of healthy but unlucky souls. But proportionate measures to try to protect them could have been taken, without the bullying clampdown of economically active Britain. Without breaking the small and medium businesses that were the backbone of Middle England.

The whole thing was so shockingly mishandled that we have to choose between two stark alternative reasons:

First, the governments of the United Kingdom and most of the Western world are all composed of completely incompetent fools, and the entire mass media are irresponsible cowards who went along with their hysterical response for the sake of an easy life and increased viewing figures.

Or, second, the global elite and their occupation government deliberately exaggerated the danger. They exploited the genuine Corona tragedies as an excuse to further their own greedy and power-hungry agenda.

But why would the global elite want to wreck the world economy? What could they have had to gain from what they've done? As it happens, rather a lot: The 2008 financial crisis was caused by the short-sighted greed of their banking system. As well as making the rest of us pay for the crimes of the banksters with a long decade of austerity, the globalists have spent 12 years fighting the fall-out from that disaster by giant Quantitative Easing bail-outs.

In plain English, they've printed vast amounts of money and given it to the already super-rich in order to stop their financial system melting down. So much so, that their whole fiat money house of cards has been poised to come crashing down of its own accord at any moment anyway.

It was only a matter of time, and the financiers and their political puppets would rightly have got the blame. But by detonating the crisis by a deliberate over-reaction to Covid-19, they clearly hope that most people will blame a natural disaster, rather than the elite and their rotten banking system.

On top of that, every day of their apparently hysterical, but actually deeply cynical, lockdown destroyed literally thousands of small and medium businesses. Their assets now go to the banks and loan sharks, while the giant corporations – bailed out as always – will go on their merry way free from pesky independent competitors.

The collapse of world stock markets wiped out the investments and crushed the pension funds of millions of decent middle class people. Super rich CEOs like Jeff Bezos sold off their own holdings just before the storm broke, and you could bet anything you've got left that they will also get tipped off just before the artificial panic is ended, so that they can buy again when the markets hit rock bottom.

And if you want to protest about all this elite fraud? Well, the police state powers seized by governments might get put back on the shelf when they turn off the mass media panic machine, but they will never be decommissioned.

So protesting and fighting back are going to be harder than before; but they're more vital than ever!

We English gave the world the ideas of limited government, equality before the law and the freedom of the freeborn individual. Now it looks as though we will have to do the same all over again!

BREXIT victory – pressure that helped win the day

FIGHTBACK Meet the battling lawyer fighting for Brexit and an end to the 'grooming gang' cover up

●●Many people contributed to the fantastic effort to get Brexit 'over the line'. But on the legal side of the struggle to deliver on the overwhelmingly English referendum instruction to Leave, literally no one did more than Robin Tilbrook.

A former Army officer turned lawyer, Mr Tilbrook founded the English Democrats in 2002, and continues to lead the party today.

From 2016, patriots all over the country watched aghast as Gina Miller – with £400,000 initial Administrative Court in the Royal Courts of Justice in the Strand, London – and then served the papers on the government's Legal Department in person as well.

When the first case was thrown out by a judge with outrageously close connections to the Brussels bureaucracy, Robin wasted no time bringing another case. In the end, both the May and the Johnson regimes found themselves in his firing line.

The main thrust of Mr. Tilbrook's legal offensive was to turn the Judgement secured by Gina Miller from a decision in favour of Remain into a decisive legal reason to block any attempt by the government to agree any extension to the Article 50 Notice, or to Revoke the said Notice without a further express Act of Parliament to authorise such Extension or Revocation.

This, Robin Tilbrook's arguments made clear, would render void and ineffective "Any further purported non-statutory Extensions or Tilbrook's legal challenge.

We may never know to what extent this background pressure contributed to the eventual government decision to bow to the will of the people and to obey the law. But it is clear that Robin Tilbrook's legal knowledge, and resolute action to apply to, played a very significant role behind the scenes. All who contributed to the very successful appeals to help fund this operation should congratulate themselves on a job well done!

Grooming gang secrecy challenged in court

●●The scandal of grooming gangs preying on overwhelmingly English girls during up to four decades of deliberate inaction by the police, courts, media and political elite is now all-too-well-known. But, while the Powers That Be now keep promising to deal with the epidemic, we keep on seeing that words are cheap, but effective action is very rare indeed.

In the latest pledge, the Home Office said that it will 'leave no stone unturned' in its bid to tackle child sexual grooming after it was reported that at least another 19,000 minors in England were exploited in the past year alone.

Some of these are Sikhs, Hindus and West Indians, but most are indigenous ethnic English. The vast majority of perpetrators are – as former head of the Equalities Commission Trevor Phillips has been expelled from the Labour Party for pointing out – members of the Pakistani Muslim community.

Despite all the fine words, however, the Home Office has refused to publish the report. The cowardly bureaucrats and their political masters claim that releasing the findings of the investigation are 'not in public interest'.

Sammy Woodhouse, one of at least 1,600 victims in Rotherham, speaks for all the others when she says "We keep hearing 'we're going

FIGHTBACK Meet the battling lawyer fighting for Brexit and an end to the 'grooming gang' cover up

●●Many people contributed to the fantastic effort to get Brexit 'over the line'. But on the legal side of the struggle to deliver on the overwhelmingly English referendum instruction to Leave, literally no one did more than Robin Tilbrook.

A former Army officer turned lawyer, Mr Tilbrook founded the English Democrats in 2002, and continues to lead the party today.

From 2016, patriots all over the country watched aghast as Gina Miller – with £400,000 initial backing from the sinister billionaire George Soros – repeatedly dragged the British government through the High Court in a prolonged 'lawfare' campaign against the democratically-expressed wish of the English electorate.

Just one man, however, saw and seized the opportunity to use the law of the land to push from the pro-Brexit side. Robin Tilbrook personally issued the case in the Administrative Court in the Royal Courts of Justice in the Strand, London – and then served the papers on the government's Legal Department in person as well.

When the first case was thrown out by a judge with outrageously close connections to the Brussels bureaucracy, Robin wasted no time bringing another case. In the end, both the May and the Johnson regimes found themselves in his firing line.

To pile on the pressure further, he issued a pre-action Judicial Review notice on the legal basis of Brexit against the Prime Minister and the Secretary of State for Exiting the European Union.

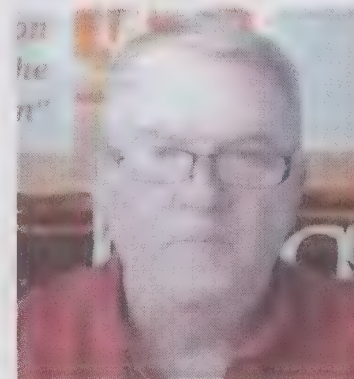

The main thrust of Mr. Tilbrook's legal offensive was to turn the Judgement secured by Gina Miller from a decision in favour of Remain into a decisive legal reason to block any attempt by the government to agree any extension to the Article 50 Notice, or to Revoke the said Notice without a further express Act of Parliament to authorise such Extension or Revocation.

This, Robin Tilbrook's arguments made clear, would render void and ineffective "Any further purported non-statutory Extensions or Revocation of the United Kingdom's notification to Leave the European Union given under Article 50 of the Lisbon Treaty."

The importance of the move was quickly recognised by other pro-Brexit and pro-English democracy campaigners. Widely followed vlogger Graham Moore, aka 'Daddy Dragon', (pictured right) was among the English constitutionalists who piled in to urge support for Mr.

Tilbrook's legal challenge.

We may never know to what extent this background pressure contributed to the eventual government decision to bow to the will of the people and to obey the law. But it is clear that Robin Tilbrook's legal knowledge, and resolute action to apply to, played a very significant role behind the scenes. All who contributed to the very successful appeals to help fund this operation should congratulate themselves on a job well done!

●●The scandal of grooming gangs preying on overwhelmingly English girls during up to four decades of deliberate inaction by the police, courts, media and political elite is now all-too-well-known. But, while the Powers That Be now keep promising to deal with the epidemic, we keep on seeing that words are cheap, but effective action is very rare indeed.

In the latest pledge, the Home Office said that it will 'leave no stone unturned' in its bid to tackle child sexual grooming after it was reported that at least another 19,000 minors in England were exploited in the past year alone.

Some of these are Sikhs, Hindus and West Indians, but most are indigenous ethnic English. The vast majority of perpetrators are – as former head of the Equalities Commission Trevor Phillips has been expelled from the Labour Party for pointing out – members of the Pakistani Muslim community.

Despite all the fine words, however, the Home Office has refused to publish the report. The cowardly bureaucrats and their political masters claim that releasing the findings of the investigation are 'not in public interest'

Sammy Woodhouse, one of at least 1,600 victims in Rotherham, speaks for all the others when she says "We keep hearing 'we're going to do this and that', and when it actually comes to it there's nothing. It's empty promises all the time."

The really good news is that, yet again, the English Democrat's Robin Tilbrook is stepping in to force the government to do the right thing. The battling patriot solicitor has just issued another Pre-Action Letter before Judicial Review. The new action is for a Judicial Review of the Home Office decision to cover up its findings, and to force the government to come clean. Watch this space!

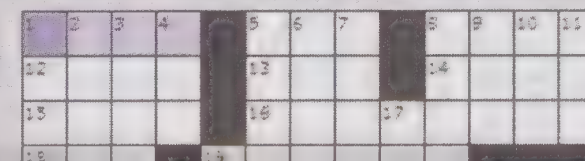

CROSSWORD – answers on page 13

ACROSS:

- 1 - Hurt.
- 5 - Make a selection.
- 8 - Our borders should not be.
- 11 - That woman.
- 18 - River mouths.
- 20 - House locations.
- 22 - Large antelope.

DOWN:

- 32 - Witty reply.
- 34 - Chaps.
- 35 - Poetic work.
- 36 - Big, hairy spider.
- 37 - English capital place.
- 48 - Self.
- 49 - Broadcasts.
- 50 - Egg on.
- 51 - High explosive.
- 52 - English capital place.

●●Many people contributed to the fantastic effort to get Brexit 'over the line'. But on the legal side of the struggle to deliver on the overwhelmingly English referendum instruction to Leave, literally no one did more than Robin Tilbrook.

A former Army officer turned lawyer, Mr Tilbrook founded the English Democrats in 2002, and continues to lead the party today.

From 2016, patriots all over the country watched aghast as Gina Miller – with £400,000 initial backing from the sinister billionaire George Soros – repeatedly dragged the British government through the High Court in a prolonged 'lawfare' campaign against the democratically-expressed wish of the English electorate.

Just one man, however, saw and seized the opportunity to use the law of the land to push from the pro-Brexit side. Robin Tilbrook personally issued the case in the Administrative Court in the Royal Courts of Justice in the Strand, London – and then served the papers on the government's Legal Department in person as well.

When the first case was thrown out by a judge with outrageously close connections to the Brussels bureaucracy, Robin wasted no time bringing another case. In the end, both the May and the Johnson regimes found themselves in his firing line.

To pile on the pressure further, he issued a pre-action Judicial Review notice on the legal basis of Brexit against the Prime Minister and the Secretary of State for Exiting the European Union.

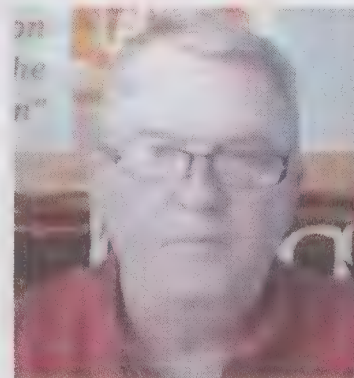

The main thrust of Mr. Tilbrook's legal offensive was to turn the Judgement secured by Gina Miller from a decision in favour of Remain into a decisive legal reason to block any attempt by the government to agree any extension to the Article 50 Notice, or to Revoke the said Notice without a further express Act of Parliament to authorise such Extension or Revocation.

This, Robin Tilbrook's arguments made clear, would render void and ineffective "Any further purported non-statutory Extensions or Revocation of the United Kingdom's notification to Leave the European Union given under Article 50 of the Lisbon Treaty."

The importance of the move was quickly recognised by other pro-Brexit and pro-English democracy campaigners. Widely followed vlogger Graham Moore, aka 'Daddy Dragon', (pictured right) was among the English constitutionalists who piled in to urge support for Mr.

Tilbrook's legal challenge.

We may never know to what extent this background pressure contributed to the eventual government decision to bow to the will of the people and to obey the law. But it is clear that Robin Tilbrook's legal knowledge, and resolute action to apply to, played a very significant role behind the scenes. All who contributed to the very successful appeals to help fund this operation should congratulate themselves on a job well done!

England were exploited in the past year alone. Some of these are Sikhs, Hindus and West Indians, but most are indigenous ethnic English. The vast majority of perpetrators are – as former head of the Equalities Commission Trevor Phillips has been expelled from the Labour Party for pointing out – members of the Pakistani Muslim community.

Despite all the fine words, however, the Home Office has refused to publish the report. The cowardly bureaucrats and their political masters claim that releasing the findings of the investigation are 'not in public interest'.

Sammy Woodhouse, one of at least 1,600 victims in Rotherham, speaks for all the others when she says "We keep hearing 'we're going to do this and that', and when it actually comes to it there's nothing. It's empty promises all the time."

The really good news is that, yet again, the English Democrat's Robin Tilbrook is stepping in to force the government to do the right thing. The battling patriot solicitor has just issued another Pre-Action Letter before Judicial Review. The new action is for a Judicial Review of the Home Office decision to cover up its findings, and to force the government to come clean. Watch this space!

CROSSWORD – answers on page 13

ACROSS:

- 1 - Hurt.
- 5 - Make a selection.
- 8 - Our borders should not be.
- 12 - Legal hold.
- 13 - Bad grade.
- 14 - Gambling city.
- 15 - School groups (abbr.)
- 16 - Became more profound.

DOWN:

- 1 - First Greek letter.
- 2 - Used footnotes.
- 3 - Listened to.
- 4 - Printers' measures.
- 5 - Most bizarre.
- 6 - Rinds.
- 7 - Wobble.
- 8 - Unrefined metals.

- 18 - That woman.
- 19 - River mouths.
- 20 - House locations.
- 22 - Large antelope.
- 25 - Washington, DC time zone.
- 26 - Food allotment.
- 28 - Knife feature.
- 31 - Australian dog.

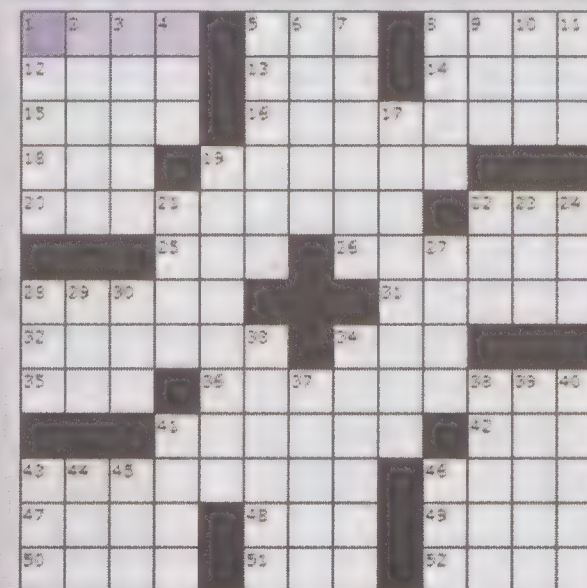

- 9 - Writing instrument.
- 10 - Compass direction (abbr.)
- 11 - Drift off.
- 17 - Rose Bowl city.
- 19 - AWOL soldier.
- 21 - Make over.
- 22 - Card game.
- 23 - Yule drink.
- 24 - One, in Havana.

- 32 - Witty reply.
- 34 - Chaps.
- 35 - Poetic work.
- 36 - Big, hairy spider.
- 41 - India's Mother ____.
- 42 - Pen point.
- 43 - Abnormally sensitive.
- 46 - Linger.
- 47 - Little piggies.

- 27 - Hue.
- 28 - Sis's sibling.
- 29 - Directed.
- 30 - Ingested.
- 33 - Archer's goal.
- 34 - Team symbol.
- 37 - Royal rule.
- 38 - Loosen laces.
- 39 - Those who fib.

- 48 - Self.
- 49 - Broadcasts.
- 50 - Egg on.
- 51 - High explosive.
- 53 - English coastal place name, from the Norse for 'nose'.

- 40 - Chasm.
- 41 - Try out.
- 43 - One ____ time (2 words)
- 44 - Toss.
- 45 - Rebel general.
- 46 - ____ Juan.

The Vanishing English

DEMOGRAPHICS Where have all the English gone? To answer the question, it's time to understand the West's Crisis of the Empty Cradles

●● If you're old enough to remember any significant English city thirty years ago, you can't miss the massive change in the faces you see and the voices you hear when you walk down the street.

Even if you're young, just compare photos of the Londoners who crowded into Trafalgar Square to celebrate VE Day in 1945, with photos of the average group of people in London today. Or in Birmingham, Leicester, Bradford, Oldham, and so on.

It's the biggest demographic change since our earliest ancestors can deny that it has happened – and that the whole process is actually speeding up.

When people talk about this demographic change, they always talk about immigration, or about the high birth rates of certain immigrant communities. No-one mentions the other side of the demographic coin: The collapsed birth rate of the ethnic English (and indeed all the other indigenous nations of these islands and of Europe).

Think about the change in those photographs again. Where have all the old Londoners, the real English, the vacuum which the new arrivals fill.

The full statistics are, as usual, almost impossible to uncover, because the ruling elite long ago decided to replace us in our own homeland: Immigrants make cheaper labour and bigger profits.

In addition, they know that a homogeneous nation with a common history and sense of identity is always a source of potential trouble for greedy and out-of-touch rulers who treat ordinary people like cattle. By destroying the old nations by mass immigration and indigenous Europeans are vanishing. So the figures they give us about the English birthrate are invariably distorted by including the fast-breeding immigrants: We are told that our birthrate is 1.7 children per woman of child-bearing age.

Even if that was true, it would still spell disaster, because it's so far under the replacement rate of 2.1 that, if carried on for three breeding generations, the population falls by nearly half.

Our birth rate started to crash in the 1960s, thanks to the Pill and legalised abortion. Since a breeding

'white flight', but in reality it's 'white die-off'.

Drill down into the figures, and it's even worse. The average 1.7 birthrate is massively skewed by fast-breeding minorities. Take them out and the true figure for the native English community is about 1.1 – a figure which, unless turned around, means an irreversible population collapse of 90 per cent in less than one hundred years from when it started. And it started more than fifty years ago.

This is the Demographic Winter, our civilisation's Crisis of the Empty Cradles. If English nationalists and

●● If you're old enough to remember any significant English city thirty years ago, you can't miss the massive change in the faces you see and the voices you hear when you walk down the street.

Even if you're young, just compare photos of the Londoners who crowded into Trafalgar Square to celebrate VE Day in 1945, with photos of the average group of people in London today. Or in Birmingham, Leicester, Bradford, Oldham, and so on.

It's the biggest demographic change since our earliest ancestors came here at the end of the last Ice Age. Most people - if they are honest and think no strangers are eaves-dropping - will admit that they are horrified; a smaller number think it's something to celebrate. But no-one can deny that it has happened - and that the whole process is actually speeding up.

When people talk about this demographic change, they always talk about immigration, or about the high birth rates of certain immigrant communities. No-one mentions the other side of the demographic coin: The collapsed birth rate of the ethnic English (and indeed all the other indigenous nations of these islands and of Europe).

Think about the change in those photographs again. Where have all the old Londoners, the real English, gone?

Some have moved to Essex or the Costas, but most of them have simply died. Died and left behind just one child - or none at all. Died without replacing themselves. Died and left the vacuum which the new arrivals fill.

The full statistics are, as usual, almost impossible to uncover, because the ruling elite long ago decided to replace us in our own homeland: Immigrants make cheaper labour and bigger profits.

In addition, they know that a homogeneous nation with a common history and sense of identity is always a source of potential trouble for greedy and out-of-touch rulers who treat ordinary people like cattle. By destroying the old nations by mass immigration and artificially promoted mixing, they aim to do away with even the possibility of a united people rising up against their exploitation and tyranny.

They don't want us to know just how quickly the English and other indigenous Europeans are vanishing. So the figures they give us about the English birthrate are invariably distorted by including the fast-breeding immigrants: We are told that our birthrate is 1.7 children per woman of child-bearing age.

Even if that was true, it would still spell disaster, because it's so far under the replacement rate of 2.1 that, if carried on for three breeding generations, the population falls by nearly half.

Our birth rate started to crash in the 1960s, thanks to the Pill and legalised abortion. Since a breeding generation is only 25 years, we are ALREADY almost two generations into that decline. That explains why our capital city has changed from English to majority immigrant in just a few decades. People talk about

'white flight', but in reality it's 'white die-off'.

Drill down into the figures, and it's even worse. The average 1.7 birthrate is massively skewed by fast-breeding minorities. Take them out and the true figure for the native English community is about 1.1 - a figure which, unless turned around, means an irreversible population collapse of 90 per cent in less than one hundred years from when it started. And it started more than fifty years ago.

This is the Demographic Winter, our civilisation's Crisis of the Empty Cradles. If English nationalists and patriots are serious about preserving our people and culture into the future, they need to understand the problem - and begin an urgent and noisy discussion about how to address it. It's that, or vanish!

English Patriot Quiz - A Baker's Dozen of Questions

●● How much of an English patriot are YOU? Find out by taking our special quiz to test your knowledge of all things English.

1) What was the Anglo-Saxon name for the site of the Battle of Hastings?

- A) ☐ Hastingafeld
- B) ☐ Senlac Hill
- C) ☐ Waterloo

4. Who invaded England in 55 B.C?

- A) ☐ The Celts
- B) ☐ The Romans
- C) ☐ The Pikeys

5. What is the name given to the survey of England carried out on the instructions of William the Conqueror?

- A) ☐ Doomsday Book
- B) ☐ Book of Judgment

8. 'Aethel' formed part of many personal names in pre-Conquest England. What did it mean?

- A) ☐ Prince
- B) ☐ Eagle
- C) ☐ Noble

10. What was the name given to the angry workers who in the years from 1811 onwards smashed new machinery because it was destroying jobs?

- A) ☐ Luddites
- B) ☐ Peep o' Day Boys
- C) ☐ Saboteurs

11. Geoff Hurst scored three of England's goals in the 1966 World Cup.

●● If you're old enough to remember any significant English city thirty years ago, you can't miss the massive change in the faces you see and the voices you hear when you walk down the street.

Even if you're young, just compare photos of the Londoners who crowded into Trafalgar Square to celebrate VE Day in 1945, with photos of the average group of people in London today. Or in Birmingham, Leicester, Bradford, Oldham, and so on.

It's the biggest demographic change since our earliest ancestors came here at the end of the last Ice Age. Most people - if they are honest and think no strangers are eaves-dropping - will admit that they are horrified; a smaller number think it's something to celebrate. But no-one can deny that it has happened - and that the whole process is actually speeding up.

When people talk about this demographic change, they always talk about immigration, or about the high birth rates of certain immigrant communities. No-one mentions the other side of the demographic coin: The collapsed birth rate of the ethnic English (and indeed all the other indigenous nations of these islands and of Europe).

Think about the change in those photographs again. Where have all the old Londoners, the real English, gone?

Some have moved to Essex or the Costas, but most of them have simply died. Died and left behind just one child - or none at all. Died without replacing themselves. Died and left the vacuum which the new arrivals fill.

The full statistics are, as usual, almost impossible to uncover, because the ruling elite long ago decided to replace us in our own homeland: Immigrants make cheaper labour and bigger profits.

In addition, they know that a homogeneous nation with a common history and sense of identity is always a source of potential trouble for greedy and out-of-touch rulers who treat ordinary people like cattle. By destroying the old nations by mass immigration and artificially promoted mixing, they aim to do away with even the possibility of a united people rising up against their exploitation and tyranny.

They don't want us to know just how quickly the English and other indigenous Europeans are vanishing. So the figures they give us about the English birthrate are invariably distorted by including the fast-breeding immigrants: We are told that our birthrate is 1.7 children per woman of child-bearing age.

Even if that was true, it would still spell disaster, because it's so far under the replacement rate of 2.1 that, if carried on for three breeding generations, the population falls by nearly half.

Our birth rate started to crash in the 1960s, thanks to the Pill and legalised abortion. Since a breeding generation is only 25 years, we are ALREADY almost two generations into that decline. That explains why our capital city has changed from English to majority immigrant in just a few decades. People talk about

'white flight', but in reality it's 'white die-off'.

Drill down into the figures, and it's even worse. The average 1.7 birthrate is massively skewed by fast-breeding minorities. Take them out and the true figure for the native English community is about 1.1 - a figure which, unless turned around, means an irreversible population collapse of 90 per cent in less than one hundred years from when it started. And it started more than fifty years ago.

This is the Demographic Winter, our civilisation's Crisis of the Empty Cradles. If English nationalists and patriots are serious about preserving our people and culture into the future, they need to understand the problem - and begin an urgent and noisy discussion about how to address it. It's that, or vanish!

English Patriot Quiz - A Baker's Dozen of Questions

●● How much of an English patriot are YOU? Find out by taking our special quiz to test your knowledge of all things English.

1) What was the Anglo-Saxon name for the site of the Battle of Hastings?

- A) ☐ Hastingafeld
- B) ☐ Senlac Hill
- C) ☐ Waterloo

2. What was a Spinning Jenny?

- A) ☐ The first industrial cotton loom
- B) ☐ The name given to a woman driven crazy by gin in the 19th century
- C) ☐ A donkey-powered winch pre-dating steam-driven pumps

3. From which French warship was the musket ball fired which killed Nelson at Trafalgar?

- A) ☐ Redoutable
- B) ☐ L'Empereur
- C) ☐ Victoire

4. Who invaded England in 55 B.C?

- A) ☐ The Celts
- B) ☐ The Romans
- C) ☐ The Pikeys

5. What is the name given to the survey of England carried out on the instructions of William the Conqueror?

- A) ☐ Domesday Book
- B) ☐ Book of Judgment
- C) ☐ The Anglo-Saxon Chronicle

6. What is the name of the hero in Bernard Cornwall's Saxon Shore book series?

- A) ☐ Thorstein
- B) ☐ Utred
- C) ☐ Athelstan

7. At their peak in 1920, Britain's coal mines employed how many miners?

- A) ☐ 1,200,000
- B) ☐ 975,000
- C) ☐ 540,000

8. 'Aethel' formed part of many personal names in pre-Conquest England. What did it mean?

- A) ☐ Prince
- B) ☐ Eagle
- C) ☐ Noble

9. Who invented the Bouncing Bomb?

- A) ☐ Winston Churchill
- B) ☐ Reginald Mitchell
- C) ☐ Barnes Wallis

10. What was the name given to the angry workers who in the years from 1811 onwards smashed new machinery because it was destroying jobs?

- A) ☐ Luddites
- B) ☐ Peep o' Day Boys
- C) ☐ Saboteurs

11. Geoff Hurst scored three of England's goals in the 1966 World Cup. Who scored the fourth?

12. It's a Long Way to where?

13. Who said "A horse, a horse, my kingdom for a horse"?

- A) ☐ James II
- B) ☐ King Harold
- C) ☐ Richard III

Bonus Question: Why were there thirteen in a baker's dozen?

White Dragon Rising!

ANCESTRY English and Proud – the flag of the ethnic English

"IN A WORLD WITH FEW CERTAINTIES, THIS FLAG TELLS US WHO WE ARE AND WHERE WE HAVE COME FROM....IT IS A SYMBOL OF OUR IDENTITY, OUR COMMON HISTORY, TRADITION AND OF THE

●●We're all hugely proud of the St. George's Cross – the traditional flag of England since the time of the Crusades. For several centuries it was largely buried in the Union Jack, but recent years have seen the red cross on a clean, white background positively boom in popularity. From sports games to St. George's Day events, pub walls to church towers, the flag of our patron saint is now once again the instantly recognised and much-loved symbol of England. Long may it remain so!

The only thing is that, in today's "multi-cultural society", there is a big push by the Powers That Be to make the St. George flag stand for England, the place, rather than the English, the people who shaped and built it. It's what they've already done with the Union Jack which, together with the term 'British' is now promoted as a civic identity.

Well, fair enough, if they've come here legally, contribute to our society and are loyal to it, people from all over the world can call themselves British.

Anyone can be British, because it's a definition based on civic matters of residency rights and recognition by the state. And if they love our country they can also be proud to fly the flags of Britain were English, he is English, despite having been born thousands of miles from the White Cliffs of Dover.

Most of the members of the grooming gangs who have defiled up to a million young girls in this country were born in England; some of them to parents who were born here too. Civically, most of them are British. But they – along with the many decent and law-abiding members of their community as well – are not English.

And their descendants will never be English, even if they stay here for a thousand years. Because being English is not about where you were born or what passport you hold. It's not even about being loyal to England and serving her faithfully.

To be English is a question of ethnic identity, of having ancestral blood-lines that go back so far, as to define you as different and separate from even closely kindred peoples such as the Dutch or the Danish, let alone from peoples whose ancestral roots are on other continents.

Is this 'racist'? No, on the contrary! The real racists are those who, by spouting the lie that anyone can be English, deny the unique identity of the real, ethnic your descendants be Chinese? If a million English people moved to Pakistan and set up colonies there, would anyone expect the Pakistanis to accept the claim that the English colonists could become Pakistani? Of course not!

But that's the trick that's being played on us English. So since the Union and St. George flags now represent simply geographical place, it follows that we need a flag which is specifically for us, the ethnic English community. That is the purpose and meaning of the White Dragon flag, and explains its fast-growing popularity.

Our Ancestral Flag

●●The English White Dragon has its roots in the ancient history of our nation. It was the banner of the Saxons in centuries of struggle

"IN A WORLD WITH FEW CERTAINTIES, THIS FLAG TELLS US WHO WE ARE AND WHERE WE HAVE COME FROM....IT IS A SYMBOL OF OUR IDENTITY, OUR COMMON HISTORY, TRADITION AND OF THE KINSHIP OF THE ANGLO-SAXON PEOPLE....LOOK FOR THE SIGN OF THE WHITE DRAGON AND YOU WILL FIND A FRIEND."

●●We're all hugely proud of the St. George's Cross – the traditional flag of England since the time of the Crusades. For several centuries it was largely buried in the Union Jack, but recent years have seen the red cross on a clean, white background positively boom in popularity. From sports games to St. George's Day events, pub walls to church towers, the flag of our patron saint is now once again the instantly recognised and much-loved symbol of England. Long may it remain so!

The only thing is that, in today's "multi-cultural society", there is a big push by the Powers That Be to make the St. George flag stand for England, the place, rather than the English, the people who shaped and built it. It's what they've already done with the Union Jack which, together with the term 'British' is now promoted as a civic identity.

Well, fair enough, if they've come here legally, contribute to our society and are loyal to it, people from all over the world can call themselves British.

Anyone can be British, because it's a definition based on civic matters of residency rights and recognition by the state. And if they love our country they can also be proud to fly the flags of Britain and of England.

But being ENGLISH is another matter. To be English is not a matter of what passport you hold; it's not even a question of where you were born. The leader of the English Democrats was born in Malaysia in the last days of the British Empire, but because both his parents were English, he is English, despite having been born thousands of miles from the White Cliffs of Dover.

Most of the members of the grooming gangs who have defiled up to a million young girls in this country were born in England; some of them to parents who were born here too. Civically, most of them are British. But they – along with the many decent and law-abiding members of their community as well – are not English.

And their descendants will never be English, even if they stay here for a thousand years. Because being English is not about where you were born or what passport you hold. It's not even about being loyal to England and serving her faithfully.

To be English is a question of ethnic identity, of having ancestral blood-lines that go back so far, as to define you as different and separate from even closely kindred peoples such as the Dutch or the Danish, let alone from peoples whose ancestral roots are on other continents.

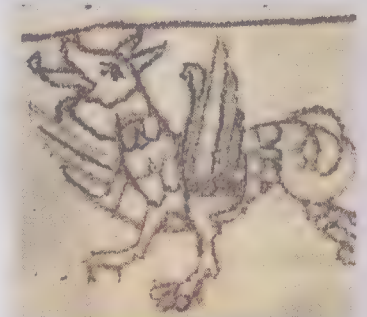

Is this 'racist'? No, on the contrary! The real racists are those who, by spouting the lie that anyone can be English, deny the unique identity of the real, ethnic English. If everyone can be English, then we, the English, automatically become nothing; a mere name from history, to be abused, exploited, outbred and obliterated from human memory. In a word, ethnocided.

Look at it the other way. If you took your family to China, would your descendants be Chinese? If a million English people moved to Pakistan and set up colonies there, would anyone expect the Pakistanis to accept the claim that the English colonists could become Pakistani? Of course not!

But that's the trick that's being played on us English. So since the Union and St. George flags now represent simply geographical place, it follows that we need a flag which is specifically for us, the ethnic English community. That is the purpose and meaning of the White Dragon flag, and explains its fast-growing popularity.

Our Ancestral Flag

●●The English White Dragon has its roots in the ancient history of our nation. It was the banner of the Saxons in centuries of struggle against Britons and Vikings. It was flown by Alfred and Athelstan, the greatest English kings. It floated proudly over King Harold in 1066, when he destroyed the Viking Army at Stamford Bridge and it was the banner under which he died at Hastings. It is even shown on the famous Bayeux Tapestry.

"IN A WORLD WITH FEW CERTAINTIES, THIS FLAG TELLS US WHO WE ARE AND WHERE WE HAVE COME FROM....IT IS A SYMBOL OF OUR IDENTITY, OUR COMMON HISTORY, TRADITION AND OF THE KINSHIP OF THE ANGLO-SAXON PEOPLE....LOOK FOR THE SIGN OF THE WHITE DRAGON AND YOU WILL FIND A FRIEND."

English, the people who shaped and built it. It's what they've already done with the Union Jack which, together with the term 'British' is now promoted as a civic identity.

Well, fair enough, if they've come here legally, contribute to our society and are loyal to it, people from all over the world can call themselves British.

Anyone can be British, because it's a definition based on civic matters of residency rights and recognition by the state. And if they love our country they can also be proud to fly the flags of Britain and of England.

But being ENGLISH is another matter. To be English is not a matter of what passport you hold; it's not even a question of where you were born. The leader of the English Democrats was born in Malaysia in the last days of the British Empire, but because both his parents you hold. It's not even about being loyal to England and serving her faithfully.

To be English is a question of ethnic identity, of having ancestral blood-lines that go back so far, as to define you as different and separate from even closely kindred peoples such as the Dutch or the Danish, let alone from peoples whose ancestral roots are on other continents.

Is this 'racist'? No, on the contrary! The real racists are those who, by spouting the lie that anyone can be English, deny the unique identity of the real, ethnic English. If everyone can be English, then we, the English, automatically become nothing; a mere name from history, to be abused, exploited, outbred and obliterated from human memory. In a word, ethnocided.

Look at it the other way. If you took your family to China, would

♦♦ The English White Dragon has its roots in the ancient history of our nation. It was the banner of the Saxons in centuries of struggle against Britons and Vikings. It was flown by Alfred and Athelstan, the greatest English kings. It floated proudly over King Harold in 1066, when he destroyed the Viking Army at Stamford Bridge and it was the banner under which he died at Hastings. It is even shown on the famous Bayeux Tapestry.

Gold Membership

You can really help England and her only Genuine English party by signing up to our exclusive GOLD membership plan. You can start to enjoy the benefits of becoming a GOLD member with a very special introductory price of only £100 TODAY!

- FREE Exclusive Black-Tie Dinner with the Chairman every year at a prestigious venue.
- FREE Exclusive GOLD MEMBER 'St George Sovereign Medal' in a presentation box.
- FREE Exclusive GOLD MEMBER Pin Badge to wear with pride and dignity.
- FREE Exclusive GOLD MEMBERSHIP Card with Key fob
- FREE Complimentary 'Annual Party Reports'
- FREE Complimentary copies of the Party's Magazine, for your friends.

Visit www.englishdemocrats.party for more information

PUBLISHED BY:

ENGLISH FREE CITIZENS
FORUM, BRISTOL, ENGLAND.

"DEFENDING AND PROMOTING THE RIGHTS OF THE ENGLISH, TO BE
ENGLISH AND TO HAVE THIS PROTECTED BY LAW"

Richard the Lionheart

C.M. K

CELEBRATE ENGLAND!

SCENERY Being locked away from it for weeks by over-officious coppers and their narks has made us all appreciate England's beauty even more. Stunning scenery can of course be found all over the world. But pound-for-pound and acre-for-acre, you'd be hard pushed to find anywhere to match the richness, variety and sheer delight of our England!

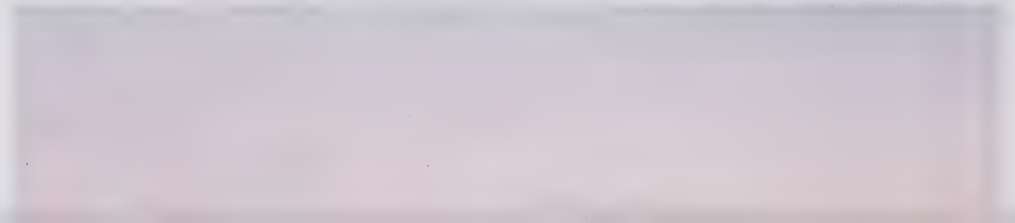

CELEBRATE ENGLAND!

SCENERY Being locked away from it for weeks by over-officious coppers and their narks has made us all appreciate England's beauty even more. Stunning scenery can of course be found all over the world. But pound-for-pound and acre-for-acre, you'd be hard pushed to find anywhere to match the richness, variety and sheer delight of our England!

The Lake District

●●The Lake District National Park was formed in 1951, although the area first became popular with visitors with the advent of the railways. Over 15 million people now visit the Lake District each year.

The Lake District

●●The Lake District National Park was formed in 1951, although the area first became popular with visitors with the advent of the railways. Over 15 million people now visit the Lake District each year.

Framlingham Castle

●●Standing proudly on the edge of a charming Suffolk market town, these sturdy brick and stones walls are the "Castle on the Hill" that features in the song by Ed Sheeran, who grew up nearby.

Avebury

●●Avebury henge and stone circles are part of an extraordinary sacred landscape in Wiltshire. Over 4,000 years old, the monument has far more atmosphere and mystery than Stonehenge.

Norfolk Broads

●●The Broads include 117 square miles of navigable rivers waterways. They were formed when peat-workings were flooded as sea levels rose due to natural climate change at the end of medieval times.

Glastonbury

●●Glastonbury Tor is a hill overlooking the Somerset Levels. Now topped by the roofless 14th century St Michael's Tower, the Tor is mentioned in Celtic mythology and linked to myths of King Arthur.

Norfolk Broads

●●The Broads include 117 square miles of navigable rivers waterways. They were formed when peat-workings were flooded as sea levels rose due to natural climate change at the end of medieval times.

Glastonbury

●●Glastonbury Tor is a hill overlooking the Somerset Levels. Now topped by the roofless 14th century St Michael's Tower, the Tor is mentioned in Celtic mythology and linked to myths of King Arthur.

North Yorkshire Moors

●●Snaking through the green valleys and wide open spaces of the North York Moors, the 24-mile-long track is one of England's best-loved restored steam railways. Which is your favourite?

Castle Combe

●●Often called "The Prettiest Village in England", Castle Combe is also around 12 miles from Bath, making it the perfect village to explore alongside one of England's loveliest historic cities.

●●The Broads include 117 square miles of navigable rivers waterways. They were formed when peat-workings were flooded as sea levels rose due to natural climate change at the end of medieval times.

North Yorkshire Moors

●●Snaking through the green valleys and wide open spaces of the North York Moors, the 24-mile-long track is one of England's best-loved restored steam railways. Which is your favourite?

●●Glastonbury Tor is a hill overlooking the Somerset Levels. Now topped by the roofless 14th century St Michael's Tower, the Tor is mentioned in Celtic mythology and linked to myths of King Arthur.

Castle Combe

●●Often called "The Prettiest Village in England", Castle Combe is also around 12 miles from Bath, making it the perfect village to explore alongside one of England's loveliest historic cities.

Patriotic Lapel Badges - Worn With Pride

View the full range: www.englishdemocrats.party/badges

BBC turns down trainees because they are WHITE: Job applicants stunned to be told corporation only wants people from 'ethnic minority backgrounds'

- BBC advertised for two 12-month trainee roles with 'allowance' of £25,000
- Did not prohibit white people but mentioned ethnic minorities in advert
- When people applied they got generic email saying it is closed to whites
- Applicant accused BBC of 'racial discrimination' against white people

Straight, white, male and invisible?

DISCRIMINATION New report confirms TV execs falling over themselves to portray minorities on-screen. And guess who pays the price?

●●It only confirms what you'll have seen with your own eyes, but a new report has found that ethnic minorities and LGBTQ+ couples are heavily and increasingly over-represented on TV. Women too get a lot of coverage, leaving the "straight, white, male" as the figure being

TV shows "over-represent" people of diverse sexualities and ethnicities.

"Statistically, the worst career prospects in TV are for white, heterosexual men. Turns out the 'white male privilege' we hear so much about on TV... doesn't exist in TV."

worse. It's become impossible to watch a commercial station without seeing wall-to-wall non-whites, mixed-race couples, homosexuals, lesbians and transsexuals.

It's become so blatant that it makes you wonder if it's really about trying "to appeal to as many consumers as possible", or if certain powerful forces out there haven't

Big Issue for them. What about our own people?

●●We've all seen Big Issue sellers. When the magazine first started, it was often sold by homeless English people and most of us were happy to give them a couple of quid for a copy as a way of giving them a helping hand. But look at them now – nearly all recently arrived immigrants of one sort or another.

So we think it's time to take the original idea and turn it into a way to help our own English people to help themselves. You might be unemployed and down on your luck, or you might need a way to make some extra cash to Issues waved in people's faces by Romanian gypsies!

Some buyers will be so pleased to see one of our own doing something to spread the word for England that they'll even give you a donation on top.

The money will soon add up, and you'll also have the satisfaction of helping to build awareness of English issues and helping to promote pro-English campaigns.

be told corporation only wants people from 'ethnic minority backgrounds'

- BBC advertised for two 12-month trainee roles with 'allowance' of £25,000
- Did not prohibit white people but mentioned ethnic minorities in advert
- When people applied they got generic email saying it is closed to whites
- Applicant accused BBC of 'racial discrimination' against white people

Straight, white, male and invisible?

DISCRIMINATION New report confirms TV execs falling over themselves to portray minorities on-screen. And guess who pays the price?

●●It only confirms what you'll have seen with your own eyes, but a new report has found that ethnic minorities and LGBTQ+ couples are heavily and increasingly over-represented on TV. Women too get a lot of coverage, leaving the "straight, white, male" as the figure being left out of the picture (unless he's a bumbling idiot, of course, plenty of those are portrayed online).

Creative Diversity Network surveyed "more than 30,000 diversity forms relating to over 600,000 TV production contributions" across the five major broadcasters: BBC, ITV, Channel Four, Channel Five and Sky.

The Diamond: The Third Cut enquiry found that LGB folk make up around 11.9 per cent of roles. One in 10 characters are LGB, the paper said, nearly double their real proportion in the population.

Brexit Party member Martin Daubney commented that the survey, revealed in the Times on 27th February, proves that British

TV shows "over-represent" people of diverse sexualities and ethnicities.

"Statistically, the worst career prospects in TV are for white, heterosexual men. Turns out the 'white male privilege' we hear so much about on TV... doesn't exist in TV."

The study backs up the results of a YouGov report in June last year. The study of 1,000 adverts shown in the UK over two months found 37 per cent featured black people, though they only make up about 3 per cent of the British population.

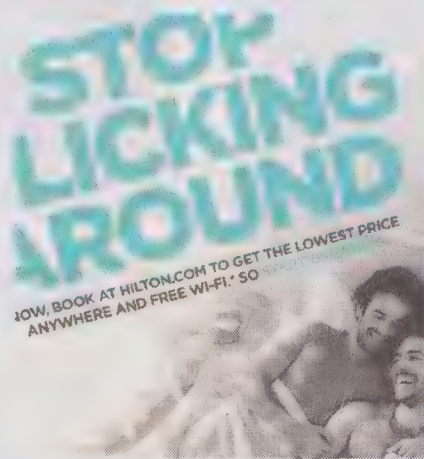

The study, undertaken for Channel 4's sales arm, concluded that advertisers 'shoehorn' in ethnic minorities in a bid to appeal to as many consumers as possible.

Brands are 'over representing' the black and minority ethnic (BAME) community by including 'one black friend within a group of white people.'

You only have to watch TV adverts to see that it's getting rapidly worse. It's become impossible to watch a commercial station without seeing wall-to-wall non-whites, mixed-race couples, homosexuals, lesbians and transsexuals.

It's become so blatant that it makes you wonder if it's really about trying "to appeal to as many consumers as possible", or if certain powerful forces out there haven't decided that it would be a good idea to breed white people in general, and the English in particular, out of existence?

about our own people?

●●We've all seen Big Issue sellers. When the magazine first started, it was often sold by homeless English people and most of us were happy to give them a couple of quid for a copy as a way of giving them a helping hand. But look at them now – nearly all recently arrived immigrants of one sort or another.

So we think it's time to take the original idea and turn it into a way to help our own English people to help themselves. You might be unemployed and down on your luck, or you might need a way to make some extra cash to fund your own political or English community activities.

Well, take a look at our bulk rates. Every copy of the English Patriot selling for £1, and we guarantee they'll be a lot more popular than the two quid Big

Issues waved in people's faces by Romanian gypsies!

Some buyers will be so pleased to see one of our own doing something to spread the word for England that they'll even give you a donation on top.

The money will soon add up, and you'll also have the satisfaction of helping to build awareness of English issues and helping to promote pro-English campaigns.

Quiz Answers From Page 6:

- Q1 - B) Senlac Hill.
- Q2 - A) The first industrial cotton loom.
- Q3 - A) Redoutable.
- Q4 - B) The Romans.
- Q5 - A) Doomsday Book, from 'Doom' meaning Judgement.
- Q6 - B) Utred.
- Q7 - A) 1,200,000.
- Q8 - C) Noble.
- Q9 - C) Barnes Wallis.

were English.

Q13 - C) Richard III, just before he was killed at the Battle of Bosworth, or so William Shakespeare tells us.

Bonus Question: When making up an order for a dozen rolls or loaves, bakers would put in an extra one just to make sure that the customer got the proper weight of bread. Selling short measures was punished and invisible?

DISCRIMINATION New report confirms TV execs falling over themselves to portray minorities on-screen. And guess who pays the price?

●●It only confirms what you'll have seen with your own eyes, but a new report has found that ethnic minorities and LGBTQ+ couples are heavily and increasingly over-represented on TV. Women too get a lot of coverage, leaving the "straight, white, male" as the figure being left out of the picture (unless he's a bumbling idiot, of course, plenty of those are portrayed online).

Creative Diversity Network surveyed "more than 30,000 diversity forms relating to over 600,000 TV production contributions" across the five major broadcasters: BBC, ITV, Channel Four, Channel Five and Sky.

The Diamond: The Third Cut enquiry found that LGB folk make up around 11.9 per cent of roles. One in 10 characters are LGB, the paper said, nearly double their real proportion in the population.

Brexit Party member Martin Daubney commented that the survey, revealed in the Times on 27th February, proves that British

TV shows "over-represent" people of diverse sexualities and ethnicities.

"Statistically, the worst career prospects in TV are for white, heterosexual men. Turns out the 'white male privilege' we hear so much about on TV... doesn't exist in TV."

The study backs up the results of a YouGov report in June last year. The study of 1,000 adverts shown in the UK over two months found 37 per cent featured black people, though they only make up about 3 per cent of the British population.

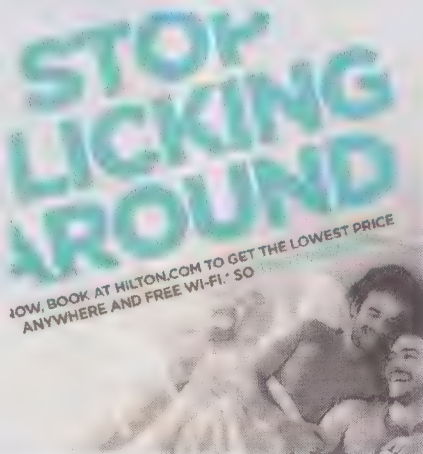

The study, undertaken for Channel 4's sales arm, concluded that advertisers 'shoehorn' in ethnic minorities in a bid to appeal to as many consumers as possible.

Brands are 'over representing' the black and minority ethnic (BAME) community by including 'one black friend within a group of white people.'

You only have to watch TV adverts to see that it's getting rapidly worse. It's become impossible to watch a commercial station without seeing wall-to-wall non-whites, mixed-race couples, homosexuals, lesbians and transsexuals.

It's become so blatant that it makes you wonder if it's really about trying "to appeal to as many consumers as possible", or if certain powerful forces out there haven't decided that it would be a good idea to breed white people in general, and the English in particular, out of existence?

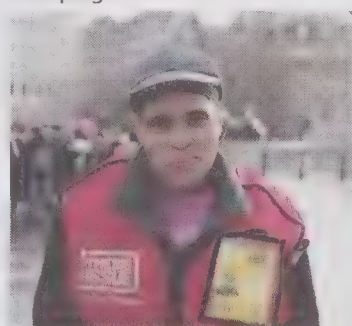

sellers. When the magazine first started, it was often sold by homeless English people and most of us were happy to give them a couple of quid for a copy as a way of giving them a helping hand. But look at them now – nearly all recently arrived immigrants of one sort or another.

So we think it's time to take the original idea and turn it into a way to help our own English people to help themselves. You might be unemployed and down on your luck, or you might need a way to make some extra cash to fund your own political or English community activities.

Well, take a look at our bulk rates. Every copy of the English Patriot selling for £1, and we guarantee they'll be a lot more popular than the two quid Big issues waved in people's faces by Romanian gypsies!

Some buyers will be so pleased to see one of our own doing something to spread the word for England that they'll even give you a donation on top.
The money will soon add up, and you'll also have the satisfaction of helping to build awareness of English issues and helping to promote pro-English campaigns.

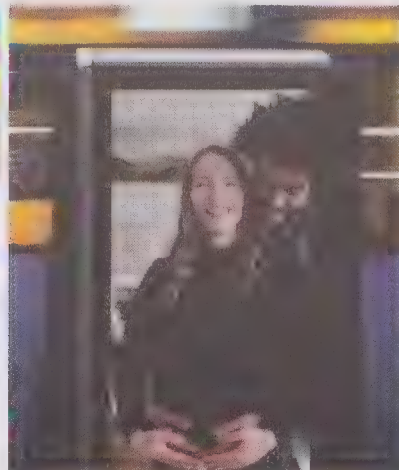

Quiz Answers From Page 6:

- Q1 - B) Senlac Hill.
- Q2 - A) The first industrial cotton loom.
- Q3 - A) Redoubtable.
- Q4 - B) The Romans.
- Q5 - A) Doomsday Book, from 'Doom' meaning Judgement.
- Q6 - B) Utred.
- Q7 - A) 1,200,000.
- Q8 - C) Noble.
- Q9 - C) Barnes Wallis.
- Q10 - A) Luddites.
- Q11 - Martin Peters.
- Q12 - Tipperary, which is of course in Ireland, but the majority of the First World War Tommies who sang the song

were English.
Q13 - C) Richard III, just before he was killed at the Battle of Bosworth, or so William Shakespeare tells us.
Bonus Question: When making up an order for a dozen rolls or loaves, bakers would put in an extra one just to make sure that the customer got the proper weight of bread. Selling short measures was punished by putting the offender in the stocks, where angry locals would pelt him with rotten vegetables, lumps of mud and anything else unpleasant they could get hold of.

What your score tells us all...

- 1 - 2: You must have meant to buy the Big Issue. "Do I know a good port? Yes, Dover!"
- 3 - 6: You need to stop watching the idiot box
- 7 - 8: Well, at least we know you're not French!
- 9 - 12: English & Proud!
- 13 - 14: Hats off to you! Buy yourself a pint!

“There will be a reckoning”

COVID-19 Political incompetence, combined with wildly irresponsible, hysterical media scare-mongering”. At the very start of the Corona Lockdown, English Democrats chairman Robin Tilbrook hit the nail on the head!

●●In their panic over Corona Virus, the Tory Government asked a handful of medical experts what to do to keep the vulnerable safe. The all too predictable result was such a Safety First policy, that the Government probably already crashed our economy by following it.

This is of course a drastic failure of political leadership. It is the job of politicians to

As Prof Ioannidis says: ‘That huge range markedly affects how severe the pandemic is and what should be done. A population-wide case fatality rate of 0.05 per cent is lower than seasonal influenza. If that is the true rate, locking down the world with potentially tremendous social and financial consequences may be totally irrational. It’s like an elephant being attacked by a house cat. Frustrated and trying to avoid the cat, the elephant accidentally jumps off a cliff and dies.’

“There will be a reckoning”

COVID-19 Political incompetence, combined with wildly irresponsible, hysterical media scare-mongering”. At the very start of the Corona Lockdown, English Democrats chairman Robin Tilbrook hit the nail on the head!

●●In their panic over Corona Virus, the Tory Government asked a handful of medical experts what to do to keep the vulnerable safe. The all too predictable result was such a Safety First policy, that the Government probably already crashed our economy by following it.

This is of course a drastic failure of political leadership. It is the job of politicians to balance the expert, specialist, medical advice with the need to keep the economy and society going.

So far as we can tell, the vast majority of those under 65, unless they have underlying serious health conditions, are unlikely to be seriously affected by the Chinese Virus.

People who are at risk should of course, be helped to take precautions, but the rest of society which is not at much risk really should be carrying on as much as they can. That would have been the sensible approach.

What we have seen instead are wild panic measures which may in the end be more dangerous than the disease.

Our political system selects far too many people for high office who prove to be incompetent once appointed. This inherent political incompetence, combined with wildly irresponsible, hysterical scare-mongering by our wholly unprofessional mouth outbreak' led to what I believe to be the unnecessary slaughter of millions of healthy cattle and sheep' until they were overruled by the then Chief Scientific Adviser, Sir David King.

He added: 'I hope that Boris Johnson, Chris Whitty and Sir Patrick Vallance show similar wisdom. They must ensure that measures are proportionate, balanced and practical'.

18, more than 50,000 excess deaths occurred in England and Wales, largely unnoticed.'

About 1,600 people die every day in the UK for one reason or another. The coronavirus deaths, while distressing and shocking, are not so numerous as to require the civilised world to shut down transport and commerce, nor to surrender centuries-old liberties in an afternoon.

As Prof Ioannidis says: 'That huge range markedly affects how severe the pandemic is and what should be done. A population-wide case fatality rate of 0.05 per cent is lower than seasonal influenza. If that is the true rate, locking down the world with potentially tremendous social and financial consequences may be totally irrational. It's like an elephant being attacked by a house cat. Frustrated and trying to avoid the cat, the elephant accidentally jumps off a cliff and dies.'

Ex- Times editor Sir Simon Jenkins recently listed other recent panics: bird flu did not kill the predicted millions in 1997. In 1999 it was Mad Cow Disease and its human variant, vCJD, which was predicted to kill half a million. Fewer than 200 died from it in the UK.

The first Sars outbreak of 2003 was reported as having 'a 25 per cent chance of killing tens of millions' and being 'worse than Aids'. The 2006 bird flu was declared 'the first pandemic of the 21st Century'.

The 2009 swine flu was predicted to produce carnage, but the Council of Europe described the hyping of that pandemic as 'one of the great medical scandals of the century'. Well, we shall no doubt see.

We shall indeed see and then there will be a reckoning!

Crossword solution, from page 5

There will be a reckoning

COVID-19 Political incompetence, combined with wildly irresponsible, hysterical media scare-mongering". At the very start of the Corona Lockdown, English Democrats chairman Robin Tilbrook hit the nail on the head!

●●In their panic over Corona Virus, the Tory Government asked a handful of medical experts what to do to keep the vulnerable safe. The all too predictable result was such a Safety First policy, that the Government probably already crashed our economy by following it.

This is of course a drastic failure of political leadership. It is the job of politicians to balance the expert, specialist, medical advice with the need to keep the economy and society going.

So far as we can tell, the vast majority of those under 65, unless they have underlying serious health conditions, are unlikely to be seriously affected by the Chinese Virus.

People who are at risk should of course, be helped to take precautions, but the rest of society which is not at much risk really should be carrying on as much as they can. That would have been the sensible approach.

What we have seen instead are wild panic measures which may in the end be more dangerous than the disease.

Our political system selects far too many people for high office who prove to be incompetent once appointed. This inherent political incompetence, combined with wildly irresponsible, hysterical scare-mongering by our wholly unprofessional mainstream media, as created a policy disaster.

The commentator Peter Hitchens agreed, asking: "Is shutting down Britain – with unprecedented curbs on ancient liberties – REALLY the best answer?

"In a pungent letter to The Times last week, a leading vet, Dick Sibley, cast doubt on the brilliance of the Imperial College scientists, saying that his heart sank when he learned they were advising the Government. Calling them a 'team of doom-mongers', he said their advice on the 2001 foot-and-mouth outbreak 'led to what I believe to be the unnecessary slaughter of millions of healthy cattle and sheep' until they were overruled by the then Chief Scientific Adviser, Sir David King.

He added: 'I hope that Boris Johnson, Chris Whitty and Sir Patrick Vallance show similar wisdom. They must ensure that measures are proportionate, balanced and practical.'

Avoidable deaths are tragic, but each year there many deaths, especially among the old, from complications of flu leading to pneumonia.

The number of flu cases and deaths due to flu-related complications in England alone averages 17,000 a year. This varies greatly each winter, ranging from 1,692 deaths last season (2018/19) to 28,330 deaths in 2014/15.

As the experienced and knowledgeable doctor who writes under the pseudonym 'MD' in the Left-wing magazine Private Eye wrote at the start of the panic: 'In the winter of 2017-

18, more than 50,000 excess deaths occurred in England and Wales, largely unnoticed.'

About 1,600 people die every day in the UK for one reason or another. The coronavirus deaths, while distressing and shocking, are not so numerous as to require the civilised world to shut down transport and commerce, nor to surrender centuries-old liberties in an afternoon.

We are warned of supposedly devastating death rates. But John Ioannidis disagreed. He is Professor of Medicine, of epidemiology and population health, of biomedical data science, and of statistics at Stanford University in California. He says the data are utterly unreliable because so many cases are going unrecorded.

He warns: 'This evidence fiasco creates tremendous uncertainty about the risk of dying from Covid-19.The real rate, adjusted for a wide age range, could be as low as 0.05 per cent and as high as one per cent.

As Prof Ioannidis says: 'That huge range markedly affects how severe the pandemic is and what should be done. A population-wide case fatality rate of 0.05 per cent is lower than seasonal influenza. If that is the true rate, locking down the world with potentially tremendous social and financial consequences may be totally irrational. It's like an elephant being attacked by a house cat. Frustrated and trying to avoid the cat, the elephant accidentally jumps off a cliff and dies.'

Ex- Times editor Sir Simon Jenkins recently listed other recent panics: bird flu did not kill the predicted millions in 1997. In 1999 it was Mad Cow Disease and its human variant, vCJD, which was predicted to kill half a million. Fewer than 200 died from it in the UK.

The first Sars outbreak of 2003 was reported as having 'a 25 per cent chance of killing tens of millions' and being 'worse than Aids'. The 2006 bird flu was declared 'the first pandemic of the 21st Century'.

The 2009 swine flu was predicted to produce carnage, but the Council of Europe described the hyping of that pandemic as 'one of the great medical scandals of the century'. Well, we shall no doubt see.

We shall indeed see and then there will be a reckoning!

Crossword solution, from page 5

CM K

Coronavirus Lockdown: blind panic or cynical power grab?

POWER GRAB Why did the government seize a whole new raft of totalitarian powers, when its 'lockdown' measures were imposed under a law that already existed?

POLITICS

Key facts about the English Democrats

●● The English Democrats launched in 2002 and are the only campaigning English nationalist Party. We campaign for a referendum for Independence for England; for St George's Day to be England's National holiday; for Jerusalem to be England's National Anthem; to leave properly and fully the EU; for an end to mass immigration; for the Cross of St George to be flown on all public buildings in England; and we supported a YES vote for Scottish Independence.

The English Democrats are England's answer to the Scottish National Party and to Plaid Cymru.

The English Democrats' greatest electoral successes to date include:- in the 2004 EU election we had 130,056 votes; winning the Directly Elected Executive Mayoralty of Doncaster Metropolitan Borough Council in 2009 and also the 2012 mayoralty referendum; we won the 2012 referendum which gave Salford City an Elected Mayor.

blind panic or cynical power grab?

POWER GRAB Why did the government seize a whole new raft of totalitarian powers, when its 'lockdown' measures were imposed under a law that already existed?

●● It is becoming clearer by the day that the British government's heavy-handed 'lockdown' strategy has done terrible damage not just to the economy but to the entire social fabric of our nation. It is possible that this was simply the result of blind panic, but a careful analysis of the sequence of events that led to the lockdown - and of the police state powers snatched by the British state in the process - suggests something more sinister.

Until the 13th March, the quarter of a million dead.

On the 13th March, apparently alarmed by all this, the Government announced the first of a series of panic measures in which it, amongst other things, suspended all elections this year (without any legal authority to do so).

Meanwhile, however, scientists and medical experts were beginning to reconsider their prognosis of what would happen with the disease.

Neil Ferguson abruptly changed his position on the 16th March. He now admitted considered to be a high consequence infectious diseases (HCID) in the UK.

"Now that more is known about COVID-19, the public health bodies in the UK have reviewed the most up to date information about COVID-19 against the UK HCID criteria. They have determined that several features have now changed; in particular, more information is available about mortality rates (low overall), and there is now greater clinical awareness and a specific and sensitive in effect, suspends most of our civil liberties and sidelines Parliament, except for a remaining role to vote through six monthly motions to continue the effect of the Coronavirus Act.

Given this sequence of events you might think that it was the Coronavirus Act 2020 which was needed to give legal force to Boris Johnson's lockdown announcement, but in fact that is not so.

The day after the Coronavirus Act 2020 received Royal Assent, the Government

But the regulations it then imposed were made under legislation dating from way back in 1984!

Why did the government deceive Parliament and the Nation in this way? What do they plan to do with the new raft of powers?

It could be something to do with delaying Brexit, as the Government will now be able to get past the end of October without having to go through the usual Parliamentary processes.

Very possibly there were

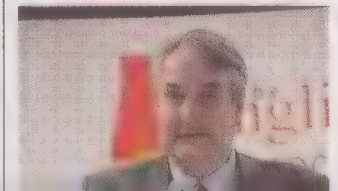

●● The English Democrats launched in 2002 and are the only campaigning English nationalist Party. We campaign for a referendum for Independence for England; for St George's Day to be England's National holiday; for Jerusalem to be England's National Anthem; to leave properly and fully the EU; for an end to mass immigration; for the Cross of St George to be flown on all public buildings in England; and we supported a YES vote for Scottish Independence.

The English Democrats are England's answer to the Scottish National Party and to Plaid Cymru.

The English Democrats' greatest electoral successes to date include:- in the 2004 EU election we had 130,056 votes; winning the Directly Elected Executive Mayoralty of Doncaster Metropolitan Borough Council in 2009 and also the 2012 mayoralty referendum; we won the 2012 referendum which gave Salford City an Elected Mayor.

In the October 2016 Batley & Spen, Westminster parliamentary, By-election we came second and easily beat all three British national parties. In the 2018 South Yorkshire Mayoral election we had 14,547 votes and saved our deposit and with a minimal campaign budget achieving 12.8% of the First Preference votes in Doncaster

CORONAVIRUS STAY HOME TO HELP US SAVE LIVES

ANYONE CAN GET IT,
ANYONE CAN SPREAD IT.

●● It is becoming clearer by the day that the British government's heavy-handed 'lockdown' strategy has done terrible damage not just to the economy but to the entire social fabric of our nation. It is possible that this was simply the result of blind panic, but a careful analysis of the sequence of events that led to the lockdown - and of the police state powers snatched by the British state in the process - suggests something more sinister.

Until the 13th March, the Government was saying that it wasn't going to panic; things could go on normally, as much as possible, whilst immunity to the virus developed naturally within our population.

This position came under increasingly hysterical attack by the mainstream. On top of this irresponsible scaremongering came statistical "modelling" by Professor Neil Ferguson of Imperial College in London, claiming that there might be a quarter of a million dead.

On the 13th March, apparently alarmed by all this, the Government announced the first of a series of panic measures in which it, amongst other things, suspended all elections this year (without any legal authority to do so).

Meanwhile, however, scientists and medical experts were beginning to reconsider their prognosis of what would happen with the disease.

Neil Ferguson abruptly changed his position on the 16th March. He now admitted that the virus death toll could end up being "substantially lower" than 20,000, with most of the fatalities being of people who would have died later this year anyway.

On the 19th March, the UK Health Authorities downgrading the seriousness of the Coronavirus. Their official statement was published on the gov.uk website. It read in part:

"As of 19 March 2020, COVID-19 is no longer

considered to be a high consequence infectious diseases (HCID) in the UK.

"Now that more is known about COVID-19, the public health bodies in the UK have reviewed the most up to date information about COVID-19 against the UK HCID criteria. They have determined that several features have now changed; in particular, more information is available about mortality rates (low overall), and there is now greater clinical awareness and a specific and sensitive laboratory test, the availability of which continues to increase.

"The Advisory Committee on Dangerous Pathogens (ACDP) is also of the opinion that COVID-19 should no longer be classified as an HCID."

Yet, just four days later, Boris Johnson announced his UK "Lockdown".

The Government rammed its "Coronavirus Bill" through Parliament with virtually no debate. This,

in effect, suspends most of our civil liberties and sidelines Parliament, except for a remaining role to vote through six monthly motions to continue the effect of the Coronavirus Act.

Given this sequence of events you might think that it was the Coronavirus Act 2020 which was needed to give legal force to Boris Johnson's lockdown announcement, but in fact that is not so.

The day after the Coronavirus Act 2020 received Royal Assent, the Government passed through the Privy Council a series of new Statutory Instruments under the Public Health (Control of Disease) Act 1984. This was the Act which granted ministers the power to create the rules which gave legal force to Boris Johnson's lockdown order.

So the Government stamped Parliament into passing legislation giving it Emergency Powers far more wide-ranging than anything passed in the two World Wars.

But the regulations it then imposed were made under legislation dating from way back in 1984!

Why did the government deceive Parliament and the Nation in this way? What do they plan to do with the new raft of powers?

It could be something to do with delaying Brexit, as the Government will now be able to get past the end of October without having to go through the usual Parliamentary processes.

Very possibly there were multiple motives. Christian Concern, for example, have reported that the lockdown measures are being "exploited by enemies of democracy" to ram through significant alterations to our abortion laws without any democratic oversight.

The global elite have grabbed even more power and wealth.

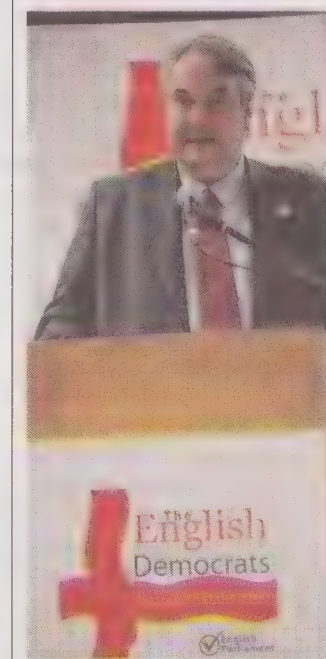

Above all, we now live in a police state. Our ancient liberties lie in ruins. Cui bono?

for Scottish Independence.

The English Democrats are England's answer to the Scottish National Party and to Plaid Cymru.

The English Democrats' greatest electoral successes to date include:- in the 2004 EU election we had 130,056 votes; winning the Directly Elected Executive Mayoralty of Doncaster Metropolitan Borough Council in 2009 and also the 2012 mayoralty referendum; we won the 2012 referendum which gave Salford City an Elected Mayor.

In the October 2016 Batley & Spen, Westminster parliamentary, By-election we came second and easily beat all three British national parties. In the 2018 South Yorkshire Mayoral election we had 14,547 votes and saved our deposit and with a minimal campaign budget achieving 12.8% of the First Preference votes in Doncaster

DEFEND OUR ENGLAND

Join The English Democrats Today!

Join The English Democrats Today!

JOIN TODAY BY COMPLETING THE MEMBERSHIP FORM !

RETURN TO:
THE ENGLISH DEMOCRATS PARTY,
OUIRES GREEN, ONGAR.

Membership Form

"Putting England First!"

Yes, I would like to join the English Democrats

To join the English Democrats Party, please complete this form OR join now at www.englishdemocrats.party

Please complete this form in CAPITAL LETTERS

Membership costs £32 annual recurring

Title: Mr. ☐ Mrs. ☐ Miss. ☐ Ms. ☐ Other: Date of Birth / /

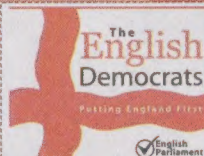

First Name: Surname:

JOIN TODAY BY COMPLETING THE MEMBERSHIP FORM !

RETURN TO:
THE ENGLISH DEMOCRATS PARTY,
QUIRES GREEN, ONGAR,
ESSEX, ENGLAND,
CM5 0QP

OR

JOIN VIA OUR WEBSITE TODAY: WWW.ENGLISHDEMOCRATS.PARTY

Membership Form

"Putting England First!"

Yes, I would like to join the English Democrats

To join the English Democrats Party, please complete this form OR join now at www.englishdemocrats.party

Please complete this form in CAPITAL LETTERS

Membership costs £32 annual recurring

Title: Mr. ☐ Mrs. ☐ Miss. ☐ Ms. ☐ Other: Date of Birth: DD / MM / YYYY

First Name: Surname:

House No: Street:

Town: Postcode: Telephone:

Email:

Please debit my card below OR I have enclosed a cheque for £32, payable to "The English Democrats"

Visa ☐ Mastercard ☐ Maestro ☐ AMEX ☐ Issue Number (If Maestro)

Card Number:

Start Date: Expiry Date: Security Code:

www.englishdemocrats.party

0207 242 1066

"England Expects That Every Man Will Do His Duty"